Ontario's Robarts Vacating His Post

Hard Fight Expected For Powerful Office

TORONTO (CP) — John Robarts announced today he is quitting as Conservative premier of Ontario, saying nine years was long enough in the province's top job and the time had come to open the door to "new approaches."

Mr. Robarts told a news conference he will not contest the next provincial election and will remain in office only until a new party leader and premier is chosen at a leadership convention to be held either in February or March.

The 53-year-old premier gave no indication of his preference for a successor, expressing "complete confidence" in the party to choose a man who would be capable of leading it to victory in elections generally expected next fall.

Commenting on his nine years in office and the unbroken 27-year rule of the Conservatives, he noted that government policies need to be continuously revised and rethought.

Opportunity for New Approach

Then he added that he has never believed any one man or group has a monopoly of ideas and that "it is necessary to provide opportunity for new approaches to be made available."

In a question-and-answer session following his formal statement, Mr. Robarts said he plans to return to private law practice in London, where he has represented the riding of London North for 19 years.

"My name is still on the door," he said.

The premier refused to speculate on the possibility of an election in the next six months but noted the government won't be four years old until next October.

The front-runner is considered to be William Davis, 41, of Brampton, the minister of education. It was from this post that Mr. Robarts launched his own leadership bid to succeed Leslie Frost in 1961.

Mines Minister Allan Lawrence, 45, a Toronto lawyer, had expected to be first into the ring after he announced a news conference for later today. But he later cancelled the news conference.

Other leading contenders are Darcy McKeough, 37-year-old Chatham businessman and minister of municipal affairs, and Robert Welch, 42, a St. Catharines lawyer who holds the portfolio of provincial secretary.

Also mentioned as potential candidates are Health Minister Thomas, Wells, 40, of Toronto; Energy Minister George Kerr, 46, of Burlington; Bert Lawrence, 47, of Ottawa, minister of financial and commercial affairs, and Rene Brunelle, 50, of Moonbeam, minister of lands and forests.

Ontario Leads Fight For Tax Concessions

OTTAWA (CP) — A two-day federal-provincial finance ministers meeting ended today with agreement to meet again in Toronto in February to discuss tax concessions for small business.

That may be the last chance the provinces will have to make their pitch before Finance Minister Edgar Benson makes final decisions on his plans for revising the Income Tax Act, to be presented in a budget next spring.

Charles MacNaughton, Ontario provincial treasurer, presented a plan to today's conference to grant the owner-operators of small Canadian business a healthy tax cut on money they invest or reinvest in their enterprises.

Mr. Benson said the MacNaughton plan is interesting, but contained some difficulties. He did not elaborate.

Ottawa's plan, embodied in Mr. Benson's white paper on proposed tax law revision 13 months ago, is to treat large and small businesses alike from a tax point of view, but offer small business some other form of help.

NEEDS TAX BREAK

Dave Steuart, provincial treasurer of Saskatchewan, described the MacNaughton proposal as a tax deferral plan and said Saskatchewan thinks the small businessman—including the farmer—should have a tax break as well as a tax deferral.

The final session of the conference also looked briefly at the federal government's new white paper on social security, but put off detailed discussion until provincial welfare ministers have examined it more fully.

Raymond Garneau, recently appointed finance minister of Quebec, said the social security white paper, the federal government's white paper on unemployment insurance, and two studies nearing completion in Quebec on social security, now should form the basis of a general revision of the whole system. Quebec wants to take over more welfare schemes as a provincial respinsibility.

The Ontario plan for tax concessions to small Canadian business would be to allow a 50-per cent credit against income taxes otherwise payable for any investment, up to $10,000 a year, that a person makes in his own business, whether individually owned or a partnership.

MORE ENCOURAGING

This, Mr. MacNaughton said, would be a greater encouragement for small business than the current federal tax law which imposes a lower rate of taxes on the first $35,000 of business profits.

The Ontario plan was tabled at the conference when it resumed its two-day session, dealing today with the federal white paper proposals for revision of the Income Tax Act.

The federal plan would do away with the 21-per-cent tax rate on the first $35,000 of company profits, and tax all company profits at about 50 per cent. Ottawa has promised to introduce some other small business.

Mr. MacNaughton's plan would be limited to individuals who put money into their own small businesses in Canada. The maximum credit that could be claimed any year would be $10,000, and over the lifetime of the individual, $100,000. Investments in property, portfolio securities, and mining, gas and oil speculations would not qualify.

TRUDEAU EXPANDS CABINET

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau today gave notice of legislation to expand his cabinet through creation of several new portfolios.

New departments will include an environment ministry which would take over some of the responsibilities of the resources department, a postmaster-general's department separate from the present communications ministry and a ministry of state for housing and urban affairs.

NO CHRISTMAS UNTIL CANE CUT

HAVANA (Reuter) — Christmas in Cuba will be postponed until July, Prime Minister Fidel Castro said Monday night.

In a 3½-hour radio and television speech, Castro said that the holiday season, like last year, was being postponed so that the sugar cane harvest would not be delayed.

He said that the best time to harvest the sugar cane crop was from November to May.

Williston Hits PCB Over Ban

Resources Minister Ray Williston today waded into his own government's red tape in preventing a SPEC brief coming before a Pollution Control Board hearing last week in Port Hardy.

"We work overtime to make things difficult," Williston, a member of the board, admitted to SPEC, central Vancouver and Cowichan-Malahat branches, and the Richmond Anti-Pollution Association when they made their appeals here against the hearing's exclusion of them.

The hearing, allowing four objectors to appear, was on an application by Utah Construction and Mining Co. to dump wastes from a huge base metal complex under construction at Port Hardy into Rupert Inlet.

AWAIT DECISION

Board chairman William Venables adjourned the hearing indefinitely pending the outcome of today's appeal by SPEC and RAPA.

A decision on the two appeals has been reserved.

"It seems to be a rather superficial situation for which to tie up as many dollars and as much time as we have this morning," Williston said following the SPEC presentation.

TECHNICALITY

But apparently they had been refused permission to appear at the Port Hardy hearing because of a technicality: the branch changed its name from "Duncan" to "Cowichan-Malahat" this summer.

"This must be the most expensive analysis of two names which has taken place here for some time," Williston said.

RAPA, represented by two attorneys, told the board today:

"Public confidence in the administration of the Pollution Control Act is undermined when an organization representing a significant body of the public is excluded from the proceedings."

FAMILY DIES IN CABLECAR

MERANO, Italy (AP) — A runaway cablecar plunged down a mountainside in the Alpine foothills today, carrying five members of a family to their death.

The victims — two men, two women and a child — were riding the privately-operated cable lift up from the Alto Adige village of Postal to a farm on the mountainside.

The brakes failed when the car reached the top of the line and the car plunged back down, crashing into a pylon at the starting station.

Wounded Lie Bleeding

PHNOM PENH (Reuter) — About 200 wounded Cambodian soldiers are lying bleeding at the scene of fierce fighting northeast of here because no helicopters are available to rescue them, military sources said today.

Field reports that a Cambodian battalion, besieged by North Vietnamese at the Mekong River position of Peam Chikang, had suffered major casualties circulated in the capital. Military spokesmen said they were still out or radio contact with the government force.

Watchdog Body Asked On Car Insurance Hikes

By BRUCE YEMEN

The Social Credit chairman of the legislative committee on automobile insurance today urged the government to set up a special board to police insurance rates.

Herb Capozzi (SC—Vancouver Centre) issued the call following reports that B.C. insurance rates may rise even higher than the increase across Canada expected next year.

Estimates for the expected increase have ranged around 12 per cent or more, following a similar increase earlier this year.

Capozzi, in a telephone interview from Vancouver, said the legislative insurance committee during the last legislative session urged that the automobile insurance board be established to rule on rates and to study whether the sale of car insurance should be entirely in the hands of the industry.

The board could be established by cabinet order because the government's 1969 car insurance legislation contains provision for such an authority.

Anti-U.S. Rioting Rages in S. Viet City

QUI NHON, Vietnam (AP) — Anti-American rioting raged Monday and today in this central coastal city following the fatal shooting of a South Vietnamese high school student by an American soldier.

A 24-hour curfew was ordered but demonstrations, window-smashing and the burning of U.S. military vehicles continued. Some American troops were injured by flying rocks, informants said.

Qui Nhon was placed off limits to all Americans.

Informed U.S. sources said the demonstrators, estimated at between 2,500 and 4,000, demanded that the American soldier who killed the youth be turned over to South Vietnamese authorities for immediate trial.

The soldier was not identified. He was in custody, and military officials were investigating the shooting.

Informed sources said the student was killed Monday afternoon when a group of Vietnamese youths climbed aboard an American Army truck carrying boxes of C-rations and tried to steal some of them.

A soldier in the truck fired a warning shot, the sources said. It killed a high school student standing nearby who was not involved in the looting attempt.

Several students paraded the dead boy's body through the streets, chanting "Yankee Go Home" and attracting followers as they marched. School children began hurling rocks at U.S. soldiers, smashing the windows of American jeeps and burning vehicles.

After Canada, What? Cross to Decide Next Post

LONDON (CP) — James Jasper Cross discussed his future with foreign office officials today but gave no indication where his next posting will be.

Accompanied by his wife, the British diplomat drove into London from his countryside retreat to confer with Oliver Wright, chief personnel officer in the foreign office.

The couple had been spending the weekend at Dorneywood, official country residence of Sir Alec Douglas-Home, the foreign secretary.

Cross appeared to be recovering from his 60-day terrorist ordeal. He smiled and posed for photographers as he entered the government building for his first appointment since his arrival from Montreal Saturday night. But he declined to make any statement.

The foreign office said he planned to make a full statement at a press conference Wednesday afternoon.

REPORT RECOMMENDS PAMPHLET WITH PILLS

OTTAWA (CP) — Each time a woman buys birth control pills she should also get a pamphlet warning her of signs of potential trouble and emphasizing the need for continuing supervision by her doctor.

This is the recommendation to the government by a committee of medical specialists in a report tabled in the Commons today.

Mayors Greet Project Money

Greater Victoria mayors today welcomed make-work money for local projects.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said there are several possibilities which have to be explored and this will be done over the next few days.

"I'm very enthusiastic," he said. "I don't have specifics. The Colquitz is a possibility, the Gorge is a possibility, routine things like footpaths and sidewalks, park development or improvement, beach access.

"None of them are spectacular but all of them are important to sections of the community."

Local municipalities will be able to borrow, through the provincial government, up to $35 million in federal funds for make-work projects over the next two years. The money is British Columbia's share of a $150 million fund being set up nationally.

Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock called the scheme "tremendous" and projects which might be considered include urban renewal in the Inner Harbor and a new low-cost housing project.

NO DIFFICULTY

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said the project his municipality has in mind is a community activity centre. Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford said her municipality has no particular project in mind, this would be up to the 1971 council. But she didn't expect any difficulty in finding projects.

Monday, Premier Bennett apparently decided that $35 million of federal money at 7.91 per cent isn't such a bad deal after all, at least for B.C. municipalities.

The premier announced Monday that municipalities may submit proposals to Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell for projects to be financed by the loan fund made available by the federal budget last week.

ANGRY REACTION

"We don't want to borrow any money from Ottawa," Bennett had said Friday in angry reaction to the budget, but he noted at the time that it would be nice if Ottawa made some "low-cost" money available to municipalities.

He said Monday that the $35 million is "not at a very low interest rate" but expressed hope municipalities would make use of it, particularly for projects that create a lot of employment.

The 7.91 rate is the same as that for Canada Pension Plan funds which the province has been using for municipal and other debentures.

Municipalities in other provinces which have gone to the open market for borrowings are currently paying more than .8 per cent.

Bennett also said that the lifting of the "freeze" on school gymnasium and activity room construction could result in about $13 million in construction.

20,000 Search For Swiss Envoy

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — As 20,000 troops and police searched today for the kidnapped Swiss ambassador to Brazil, an unconfirmed report circulated that his captors were demanding the release of 68 to 70 political prisoners.

The report came from a source who said the demand was made in one of two documents purporting to come from the kidnappers. The documents were in the hands of the police, and they refused to make public what they said.

Ambassador Giovanni Enrico Bucher, 57, whose wealthy family owns a chain of resorts in Switzerland and Italy, was seized Monday in the Rio suburb of Laranjeiras: His police bodyguard was shot three times; one bullet hit his spine and paralysed his arms and legs.

Witnesses said seven men and a woman blocked off the ambassador's limousine with two cars, ordered the driver to the floorboard and shot the guard, Helio Carvalho de Araujo, when he resisted.

Abandoning the two blocking cars, they hustled the ambassador into another car and drove off, a fourth car trailing behind. One of the two getaway cars was later abandoned at a beach.

The operation took about two minutes to carry out.

A terrorist group called the National Liberation Alliance claimed responsibility in pamphlets scattered about the scene. This is the document said to contain the ransom demand.

Monday night a woman telephoned the city editor of the newspaper Ultima Hora, saying a letter from the kidnappers had been deposited in a downtown bar. When reporters arrived, police, called by the bar owner, had confiscated that paper, too. Some sources described the document as a manifesto.

Police sources said the terrorists vowed in the pamphlets not to harm Bucher if the government meets their demand. The notes also said kidnappings will continue as long as political prisoners are tortured in jail.

Bucher is Brazil's fourth victim of political kidnapping and the 15th in the Western Hemisphere since September 1969. Three have been killed when the governments of Gautemala, Uruguay and Canada refused to release prisoners, but Brazil's military regime has let 60 prisoners go to gain the release of the three diplomats previously kidnapped here.

. . . ROBARTS RESIGNS

seat in 1967, and is well known through his legal work with the National Hockey League Players' Association.

Family reasons played a part in his decision, Premier Robarts said.

"I've teen-age children at home—the old man should be home occasionally," he said in reference to his 16-year-old daughter and 13-year-old son.

Mr. Robarts has been considered perhaps the most influential of the provincial leaders. He was the fourth Conservative premier since the party started its 27-year reign.

IN POWER SINCE 1948

As head of the party which has been in power since 1943 in Canada's richest province, the premier of Ontario packs a big wallop in dealing with Ottawa and the other provinces.

That position of influence has led observers to believe that Mr. Robarts could have any post he wishes in the federal Progressive Conservative party, not excluding the leadership if Robert Stanfield were to step down.

Mr. Robarts told reporters: "It has not been easy for me to arrive at this decision. I have spent many months considering all the implications which are involved.

"I recognize that these are not easy times in the political life of Ontario and of our country.

"However, after having served the people of Ontario for some 19 years, nearly half of them as prime minister of the province and leader of the Progressive Conservative party of Ontario, I have concluded that the time has come for me to pass the mandate to some one else in our party . . .

"To those who may wonder, as inevitably some people must, why I have chosen this particular time to step down, I can only say that my own personal political philosophy leads me to believe that in the very fast-moving times in which we live government policies and actions need to be continuously reviewed, revised and rethought . . ."

In the Robarts administration, the premier preferred compromise—or even backing away from a prickly issue—to beating down the opposition.

He displayed no personal idiosyncrasies and produced few headline-type quotations, projecting instead the image of a business-like administrator with no particular fondness for the political bear-pit.

Mr. Robarts was born at Banff, Alta., Jan. 11, 1917, the son of a bank manager who took the family to Winnipeg and Galt, Ont., before moving to London.

Mr. Robarts graduated from the University of Western Ontario at London in 1939 a8t directly into the navy in 1940 as an ordinary seaman. He ended the war as a lieutenant after seeing service in the Atlantic, Pacific and Mediterranean. He received his law degrees from Toronto's Osgoode Hall in 1946.

ALL COUPLE WANTS IS LION OR TIGER

BONNER SPRINGS, Kan. (UPI) — Mr. and Mrs. David Couch want to buy a lion or a tiger, housebreak it and let it mingle with their two dogs, two house cats, two horses and son and daughter.

They put an ad in a Kansas City newspaper but got no response.

"I want one so bad," Mrs. Couch said Thursday, "and so do the kids and my husband."

David, a sheet metal worker, was hoping to go to Africa to get a big cat "but I talked him out of that," she said.

"We'll treat it like a dog, I guess you'd say. He'll stay in the basement or the house during cold weather and I'll take him for walks on a lead to give him exercise."

She figures so long as the animal is defanged and declawed the neighbors won't object.

"He won't be nearly the problem my German shepherd is," she said. "He's trained as a guard dog."

Capozzi said the industry should be required to justify its increases before such a board.

"They wouldn't condone such an increase until they were satisfied the industry had done everything possible to keep the rates down," Capozzi said.

DISAPPOINTED

He expressed disappointment with the efforts of the industry to date in keeping rates down. Capozzi indicated agreement with the industry's contention that rising repair costs are major cause for increases, but added:

"The insurance companies have done a poor job of putting pressure on automobile manufacturers . . ." to build safer cars which are more cheaply repaired.

Capozzi said the insurance industry simply bases its rates on the cost figures from the previous years without doing enough to cut those costs in the years ahead.

PRICES 'TOO HIGH'

Capozzi also recalled that the legislative committee had heard evidence suggesting the $22 price set for the compulsory accident benefits coverage was too high.

"It certainly shouldn't go any higher," he said of reports that the insurance industry planned to maintain the rate for the coming year.

In its report, the legislative committee made a veiled reference to the possibility of the provincial government going into the automobile insurance business, perhaps to sell the compulsory coverage which provides no-fault accident benefits for death and injuries.

STUDY COSTS

"This board should be asked to study the cost and ramifications of various proposals whereby the compulsory package or portions of it could be operated by other than the industry," the report stated.

The report was interpreted at the time as a warning to the industry to watch its rates. The 1969 insurance legislation also has provision for the government getting into the business of selling insurance.

The Social Credit party convention last month turned down a resolution calling for the government to get into the business to compete with private firms.

Man, 82, Killed; Inquiry Called

Greater Victoria Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre will hold a coroner's inquiry this week into the apparent accidental death of an 82-year-old man.

James McCulloch was found dead in his apartment, 749 Fort, Saturday. He had not been seen for three or four days.

Police said McCulloch apparently tried to climb on a card table in the kitchen when he fell, striking his head on a ledge about eight inches from the floor.

New Secretary

Larry Tickner has been elected secretary of the Victoria local of the Socialist Party of Canada.

Tickner, 39, of 589 Nora Place, takes over from George Jenkins. The new secretary is a carpenter, and is Carpenters Union delegate to the Victoria Labor Council.

Dave Emery was elected financial secretary, replacing Bill Johnson, while Jenkins was re-elected literature secretary.

Jagger Dresses Well

LONDON (Reuter) — Rolling Stone Mick Jagger, long-haired symbol of rebellious youth, now is rated one of the most elegant dressers in show business. At least that's the view of the British magazine Tailor and Cutter, considered the men's wear bible. Its latest issue carried a recent picture of Jagger wearing a natty suit and fashionable frilly shirt.

Drifters Saved

DACCA (Reuter) — Seven Pakistanis swept away by last month's cyclone and tidal wave clung to the wreckage of a boat for 25 days before being rescued by a Romanian ship in the Bay of Bengal, it was reported today. They were picked up about 200 miles from Khulna port in the Ganges delta Sunday, said a radio message from the vessel Mara Mura received by Khulna radio station.

Auditor Tiff—Issue of Status

OTTAWA (CP) — Conflict between the government and Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson boiled down to a question of status in testimony given today by Treasury Board President C. M. Drury to theCommons public accounts committee.

"Apparently there is not agreement from the auditor-general as to what particular benchmarks should be used to determine the salaries paid to certain members of his staff,' Mr. Drury told the committee.

As for himself, he told reporters later, he considers the case is closed although the committee may want further evidence that Mr. Henderson is being treated fairly.

The minister was called by the committee following charges by the auditor-general, the watchdog over federal spending, that treasury board has downgraded the positions of senior officers in his department.

JOBS RECLASSIFIED

Mr. Drury told the committee that 27 of 143 positions in the auditor-general's office were "red-circled" by the treasury board in 1969 following a reclassification of jobs in the public service for purposes of collective bargaining.

"Red-circling" means a freeze on salary increases for employees who are paid more than limits established for their new job category.

The freezes are relaxed when salaries of other employees in the category catch up. But the transitional procedure has been a cause of concern for federal workers and their unions. One touchy issue has been the "benchmarks" through which treasury board determined what jobs in the public service should be lumped together.

Mr. Drury said reclassification of the auditor-general's staff was reviewed twice by an independent committee specifically to avoid criticism that the government was attempting to undermine one of its most constant critics.

GET LUMP SUM

The minister said there was less red-circling in Mr. Henderson's office than elsewhere in the public service. Only 18.1 per cent of the positions were frozen compared with red-circling of 95 per cent of the auditors in the department of consumer and corporate affairs.

Further, those whose pay was frozen are to receive a lump sum of one-half the increases won in collective bargaining for those colleagues who are catching up. Negotiation for a new contract with public service auditors began July 1, 1970, and is continuing.

Mr. Drury's assurances that the auditor-general's men have been treated as other members of the public service did not win support from some Conservative MPs on the committee.

George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings) told reporters the government's actions add up to a "put-down of the auditor-general."

Mr. Henderson's auditors, Mr. Hees said, have higher qualifications than others getting equal pay.

The same feeling was expressed by Mr. Henderson himself before the committee last week. He maintained that the 27 positions which were red-circled represent the core of his staff and involve men with more extensive knowledge and training than excise or income auditors with whom they had been grouped.

City Building Figures Lag Behind 1969

But the 10 months since Jan. 1 still show a 35 per cent lag behind the 1969 period.

Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. said B.C. cities of 10,000 population and more reached their highest level of starts for the year in October, and the 2,022 units rated 62 per cent above the 1,246 units recorded in October a year ago.

It was given as the first year-to-year increase of 1970, although the 10-month figure is 35 per cent off the 20,339 units totalled to the end of October a year ago.

Victoria had 195 starts in October, against 176 a year ago, of which 108 were row, apartment and other multiple type units, and 87 were single, semi-detached and duplex units, compared with 74 and 102, respectively, a year ago.

Since January there have been 1,524 multiple and 704 single units, compared with 2,303 and 1,106 in the 10 months of 1969.

There were 183 newly completed, unoccupied single family homes and duplexes in Victoria area in October, a sharp increase from 92 a year earlier, and 318 apartment units unoccupied, against 290 last October.

Most centres of 10,000 or more persons showed increased starts in October, and continued lower performance for the January-October period.

FARMER . . . to continue fight

'I CHAFE IN THE PONDEROUS BUREAUCRACY'

Nixon's Top Black Official Quits Position

By CARROLL KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON (WP) — James Farmer, one of the administration's top black officials, resigned for "personal reasons" Monday as assistant secretary of health, education and welfare, effective Dec. 21.

At a news conference, Farmer said that his achievements were "not sufficient, or fast enough, to satisfy my appetite for progress" and that "I chafe in the ponderous bureaucracy."

THINK TANK

While otherwise declining to criticize the administration, Farmer said he believed he could be more effective in fighting for minority rights outside than inside the government. He said he hoped to help establish "a black think tank" to focus on minority problems.

President Nixon, in a "Dear Jim" letter, hailed Farmer for his contributions "to this administration and to the American people over the past 22 months."

"Your impact on efforts to improve the quality of life for all Americans has been considerable, and the guidance and sensitivy you have provided have been particularly significant in helping with the development of programs and policies designed to eliminate the inequities in our society affecting blacks and other minorities," the president wrote.

Before his resignation was announced, Farmer met with the president and urged him to name an ombudsman to hear the pleas of the "little man." He also urged Nixon to "make more contact with black leaders."

The president was "extremely responsive to these suggestions," Farmer said.

STILL AVAILABLE

Pressed for an explanation of his differences with the administration, Farmer said he had had "differences with this administration as with all others" but that was not the "critical issue in my resigning."

In his letter to the president, Farmer said he appreciated the opportunity "I have had during the past year and a half to further this administration's efforts in behalf of the American people, particularly blacks and other minorities . . . I would like to assure you that I am available for whatever service my future commitments will allow."

White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said the president's meeting with Farmer "went very well and Mr. Farmer is leaving on a very, very good basis."

Farmer expressed thanks to "two sensitive and gifted men," former HEW secretary Robert H. Finch and Secretary Elliot L. Richardson.

Richardson introduced Farmer at his news conference and said he wished to acknowledge publicly his "affection, regard and indebtedness" to Farmer, who was in charge of administration at HEW.

A former organizer and head of the Congress of Racial Equality, Farmer said he would not return to that organization. But he said he longed "for my old role as advocate, critic, activist."

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Point-Blank Shooting of Monk, Baby Described

By WILLIAM GREIDER

FT. BENNING, GA. (WP) — Charles Sledge, an ex-GI from Sardis, Miss., clasped his hands as though in prayer and bowed his head slightly forward.

That, he explained, was how the white-robed Vietnamese monk looked — pleading — when Lt. William L. Calley shot him in the face. "Half his head was blown away," said Sledge. It was a point-blank range.

A young woman tried to surrender, her arms raised in the air, according to Thomas Turner, a college student from Nebraska, another ex-soldier who was there. Sledge, who was Calley's radio operator that day, also remembered a baby, perhaps two years old, who tried running away.

Lt. Calley got them both, according to the two eyewitnesses. Then the killing was interrupted because, as Sledge recalled, a radio message came in from the company commander: "Take a chow break."

This grisly sequence of slaying was recounted Monday for the six army officers sitting in judgment on Lt. Calley, accused of murdering no less than 102 people at a once-obscure hamlet called My Lai.

Even so, the shooting of these three individuals, followed by lunch, seemed much less damaging to Calley than the methodical, premeditated action which Turner attributed to his old platoon leader — the systematic slaughter of 90 to 100 people.

Defence lawyer George W. Latimer called the narrative "devastating" and pleaded with the judge to exclude it on technical grounds or even to declare a mistrial.

What Turner, a resident of Bellevue, Neb., says he witnessed was Lt. Calley shooting, first, one group of people herded into a ditch east of the village, then a second group, then another, then another and another. The process of herding and shooting, he said, lasted for approximately an hour.

"Did you ever see any of the people placed in the ditch come out?" the prosecutor asked.

"No, I did not," said the 24-year-old witness.

Turner is one of the few GI's from Company C who did not talk much to anyone in advance of the court-martial about his experience at My Lai.

His description of the mass murder at the ditch — spaced over an hour's time and involving not one group of 70 people, but several groups totalling close to 100—exceeds and conflicts with the army's specification of charges against Calley, the defence lawyers argued.

The prosecutor, Capt. Aubrey M. Daniel III, insisted to the contrary — that Turner's account of what happened clarifies "various discrepancies" which occured in eyewitness accounts heard earlier from several other ex-soldiers. What they saw, said Daniel, were smaller slices of the hour-long action which Turner described and that explains why some mentioned conflicting estimates of the number of victims — ranging from to 60 or 70.

The business-like manner which Turner described also is important, the prosecutor said, in establishing Calley's "premeditation and intent to kill."

Judge Reid W. Kennedy did rule that Turner's account of the killing of the young woman atempting to surrender would be excluded from evidence because her homicide is not listed among the 102 in the original bill of particulars.

The judge will rule today on whether Turner's account of the assembly-line killings also conflicts. "That," defence lawyer Latimer complained, "is piling deaths upon deaths, that's what it's doing to us."

In his account, Turner said that, when he first came up to the ditch, there was already one pile of bodies there, covered with blood. Lt. Calley and a rifleman named Paul Meadlo were standing on the dike looking down, he said.

"Then Lt. Calley began firing into another group kneeling in the ditch," Turner said. He saw the platoon leader empty his rifle, change ammunition clips and keep firing, he said.

Turner walked away some distance, joined two other GI's and sat down for a break — where they rested for an hour or more.

"During this time," he testified, "they were bringing up small groups of people. They were being placed into this ditch and Lt. Calley was firing into it."

He said he couldn't remember how many additional groups were rounded up, but he recalled that each bunch of new victims would be placed alongside the old ones, then shot. In all, he belives he saw 90 to 100 people killed there.

Even after that, he said, the young woman's death stood out in his memory. "She was giving herself up," Turner said. "You could see that because she had her hands raised . . . Lt. Calley shot her several times . . . in the chest . . . she fell over into the rice paddy."

According to Sledge, Calley also killed the monk and the baby after the larger action at the ditch was completed (though Sledge did not recall the sequence of group slayings which Turner described).

When they came upon the man dressed like a Buddhist priest, Sledge said, "Lt. Calley started asking, 'Viet Cong la dai,' and the priest said, 'No Viet, no Viet.'

"Lt. Calley asked him a few more questions . . . then Lt. Calley hit him in the face with the butt of his rifle. He fell back a little bleeding on the mouth, sort of pleading. Lt. Calley took his rifle at point blank and pulled the trigger."

Where was the gun aimed? "In his face," said Sledge.

When they saw the baby escaping, Sledge said his leader "picked it up by the arm, flung it into the ditch and fired."

In a limited way, his testimony did help Calley concerning 30 other slayings charged to the lieutenant at another location in the village. Sledge saw the people killed, but doesn't think that Calley shot at them.

On the other hand, Sledge does remember Calley's order to the soldiers who did the shooting. It was, he said: "Waste 'em."

Vive la Difference—Still

THE NATIONAL REPORT ON the royal commission to support the equality of women contains more than a suggestion—and who would knock it?—of feminine contradiction. There is, for instance, a strong criticism of the fact that few women make their way to the House of Commons to help govern the country — only 18 in half a century, it says. Yet this is offered as an example of male domination.

To get elected one must offer himself or herself as a candidate—which means there must be a group to make the nomination and public support to supply the election votes. Since women make up half of the population, it seems obvious where the blame lies for an absence of political success. Many an able woman — and we do not have to look beyond this community for examples — has found no lack of male as well as female voters when she decided to run for office. That seems like equality. Any thought of mandatory quota systems for public office or public employment would do women—and the country—a lasting disservice.

Other aspects of the long-considered report call for more serious treatment. Legal abortions on demand emerge as a salient point of contention by women across the country. It is clear that the present law, although superficially more permissive than the former strict restraints, falls short of what is desired. It might well be widened, subject to some safeguards against abuse. Abortion should not become a matter of casual convenience or a clumsy and possibly damaging alternative to proper birth control practices.

The recommendation on day-care centres is a valid one, and much still remains to be done in this useful field, particularly for working mothers. The recommendation of a minimum age of 18 for marriage raises a pertinent point. Teen-age marriage statistics show marriage at any age less than that to be an almost inevitably losing gamble. Many of the recommendations are not new—merely reaffirmations or extensions of practices already in wide use. More available birth control information, sex education, sterilization, joint income tax arrangements, laws to ensure equal employment opportunities—such are in this category.

Others are more controversial, and some are far-fetched. The $500 annual grant to mothers for each child under 16 years of age would accentuate all the worst features of the family allowance legislation which already is under amendment to restrict its incidence. And who but husbands and wives would in the end pay for most of this vast governmental benevolence and the income tax would in addition be levied on it?

The move for greater equality in employment opportunities has many worthy aspects. But the main principle should not be weakened by excessive demands. There are many occupations in which women—young and attractive ones—are preferred: air stewardesses, waitresses, receptionists, to name a few. Why pass arbitrary laws as to age, appearance or sex which would deny the public what it wants? When a wide preference for young and comely females serving the public can be interpreted as a degradation of womanhood, perhaps we ought to have more men on the women's commission.

Action and Reaction

FEW PROVINCIAL PREMIERS could have been quicker to condemn the federal budget of December 3 than Premier Bennett, yet few can have acted more speedily in announcing a building program which is right in line with finance minister Benson's expressed plan to combat unemployment.

Among other measures, the budget provided for a $150-million low-interest loan fund for use of the provinces and municipalities in financing public works. Mr. Bennett's comment was that "we don't want to borrow any money from Ottawa;" while Mr. Gaglardi loyally added: "We can borrow our own money at eight per cent."

Yesterday Mr. Bennett announced that school boards throughout the province are now freed from the restriction that had been placed on construction of activity rooms and gymnasiums, and that money will be provided for such projects as are proved "essential." Whether or not Mr. Bennett intends to avail himself of the federal funds made available for projects of this nature, it is straining coincidence to believe that the federal offer had no influence on his action. Mr. Benson indicated that the anti-inflationary down-hold is off, and the provincial action followed immediately. —

Mr. Bennett may not draw on the available federal loan — although his publicly threatened deficit suggests that he could use some —but he has lost no time in moving into the building field. It will add little, however, to the weight of his sweeping accusation that the federal government is no more than "a government for Quebec" if he then refuses to avail himself of such aid as Ottawa offers.

It comes out more clearly than ever that Mr. Bennett's running fight with the nation's government is political, not financial, and he doesn't seem to be getting many recruits — except cabinet ministers — in this wealthy western province.

As the Risks Mount

NEXT YEAR'S ALASKA SALmon catch, according to current forecasts, will drop about 20 per cent below the annual average. Biologists explain that the reduction is attributable in part to the hot dry summer of 1965, which inhibited spawning and survival.

The report is of local interest because the situation parallels that revealed in miniature at Goldstream this year. Hot, dry weather had reduced the water put into the stream to the point where fish could not have ascended to spawning beds had it not been for the whole-hearted "save the salmon" efforts by the public.

Recently the concern for fish survival has been focused on two factors — pollution and wholesale dredging of fish by foreign fishermen off our coasts. These dangers are certainly serious, but natural causes are also factors. Dry seasons occur and the salmon population can be decimated. But water contamination on the scale we now know, and over-fishing, are elements beyond the natural hazards to which any species is normally exposed.

Under the best of circumstances, survival for the salmon is a constant struggle. If man is to preserve the species then he must correct these lethal dangers which he has created — and in addition apply his ingenuity to lowering destructive natural risks where he can.

We will continue to have hot, dry seasons thoughout the world. But there are some compensatory actions we can take. That is the very practical policy the conservationists are urging.

'My Heart Bleeds'

About the Windsor policeman with 12 children who might lose the Family Allowance, my heart bleeds for him — only $10,000 a year. Maybe we should hand the hat round for them!—Ross Hartnell, 2706 Mount Stephen.

What's the Use?

After considering the latest efforts of our federal government to take from the so-called middle class and give to the poor, one begins to wonder what other initiative-destroying schemes Pierre and his boys have in store for us. In 1971 take away their family allowance, have them pay for UIC they have not and probably never will use. In 1972?

It is erroneous to consider anyone earning $10,000 per year gross, as qualifying for that magical hierarchy, "The Middle Class." For a single person, yes, but not a man with a growing family. Perhaps $20,000 per year but certainly not $10,000.

Having come from a low income family, determined to attain a better way of life for my children, these proposed setbacks by our managing directors are to say the least disheartening.

One begins to wonder. "What's the use." Let the government continue destroying initiative and this country will surely be in a sad state of affairs.—Oh No Trudeau.

FROM TORONTO — By HAROLD GREER

Plans That Leave the Poor Still Poor

IN a speech to the Canadian Conference on Social Welfare here last June, Mr. D. W. Rogers, the deputy minister of social development for Alberta, noted that no one ever objects to public assistance for children, the disabled, and the elderly. "But in between the young and the aged, and in between the obviously unemployable and the employable," he said, "there are all shades of gray, and it is the ambivalent feeling of Canadians about these gray areas that causes the uncertainty about public assistance or any other income support measure."

Greer

Dr. J. W. Willard, the federal deputy minister of welfare and author of the White Paper "Income Security for Canadians," was on the same panel of speakers as Mr. Rogers and he must have made at least a mental note of Mr. Rogers' remark. Because he has followed it to the letter in the White Paper, which helps the young, the old and the disabled and leaves the great, gray in-between areas to be solved by the heroes of some future day.

Or rather, to be fair to Dr. Willard, Prime Minister Trudeau and certain of his cabinet colleagues have done so. It is no great secret in welfare circles that Dr. Willard's first draft of the White Paper contained a strong argument and recommendation for the adoption of a guaranteed annual income system for everyone, but that Mr. Trudeau — he who said there would be "no more free stuff" in the 1968 elections — would have none of it. The White Paper has been almost two years in the making because Dr. Willard has been furiously rewriting, trying to hold on to a few principles and please his political masters at the same time.

Contradictory

Not surprisingly, the White Paper has turned out to be a most remarkable document — utterly contradictory in its philosophy, almost mischievously weak in its key argument, strong where it should be weak. As a rejection of the guaranteed annual income, it is simply not to be taken seriously and it does not take much reading between the lines to appreciate that Dr. Willard did not intend it to be.

The White Paper, for example, raises the old bromide of work incentive as "the major criticism" of the guaranteed annual income approach and says that further study and investigation are needed to find out what effects such a program would have on the incentive to work and to save.

But no social worker gives much credence to that argument any more because there is not enough clinical evidence to support it. The vast majority of low income earners want to work and get ahead, and the few who don't are either tolerable dead weights or else they can be ruled ineligible for GAI assistance, just as is done now in some welfare programs. In short, the "incentive problem" is a political rather than a professional problem — something for the politicians to sell rather than for the professionals to solve.

Ridiculously Naive

Similarly, the White Paper poses the GAI "alternative" in ridiculously naive terms. "The many defects that are apparent in the existing programs lead to a basic question," it declares. "Why not do away with all these programs and introduce in their place one overall guaranteed income program to provide all persons in poverty with a basic minimum income?"

It then proceeds to show how difficult it would be to eliminate most existing programs, such as unemployment insurance, workmen's compensation, the Canada Pension Plan, etc., and concludes that, really; only family allowances, the guaranteed income supplement to the old-age pension, the War Veterans' Allowance, and some parts of the Canada Assistance Plan would be supplanted by a guaranteed income scheme and therefore the cost would be prohibitive.

But this sets up straw men to knock down. No serious student of the subject, to my knowledge, has ever suggested that a GAI program would make contributory income protection programs, such as unemployment insurance or pensions, unnecessary. Indeed, it is gross misrepresenation and self-serving argument to complain that the GAI would not sweep away all existing programs: that is not what it is designed to do.

Income protection programs are intended to keep people from falling into poverty and are generally built on the insurance principle. Income support programs, on the other hand, are intended to help people who are already poor — the old-age supplement, family allowances, disability allowances and welfare payments under the Canada Assistance Act. The argument for a guaranteed annual income is that it is a superior alternative to income support programs.

The great difficulty with these programs now is that they do not pay enough and are therefore self-defeating. They alleviate hardship but they do not make the poor unpoor, leaving poverty to breed more poverty. The claim made for the guaranteed annual income is that by assuring an adequate minimum, the vicious circle of poverty can be broken, giving supportive social services and rehabilitative programs a chance to succeed. Current income support programs simply perpetuate poverty; the GAI looks to its eradication.

The White Paper does not recognize this point, or even make the argument. It talks about the need for greater emphasis on anti-poverty measures, but it ends up by proposing higher family allowances for low-income families, and more money for the needy aged, which will still leave most recipients who are below the poverty line where they are—below the poverty line. At least, it concludes lamely, these programs prove "a point of departure for the future extension of the guaranteed income approach."

Dr. Willard, in short, has been shot down but at least he has kept the flag flying. The White Paper is not a White Paper at all in the traditional sense of being a dispassionate, professional analysis of the problem and a weighing of solutions. The analysis is excellent enough — Mr. Trudeau could hardly fault his advisers on that — but the solutions are strictly political.

Mr. Trudeau, of course, must yet deal with Sen. David Croll, who has as much as said that the report of his Senate Committee on poverty will come out for the guaranteed annual income. Between a prime minister and a Senator, perhaps, there is no contest, but then David Croll is no ordinary Senator. One way or another he has forced more social reform on governments than he cares to remember; it is a track record he will not want to see broken.

FROM WASHINGTON — By JAMES RESTON

The Problem: Just Too Many People

THE official 1970 census figures on the population of the United States are a dramatic reminder that it is not primarily the decisions of Governments that are changing the world, but the fertility of the human mind and body. The disorder of the planet cannot be blamed primarily on officials, feeble and blundering though they may be. For all of them, at all levels and in all systems in all parts of the world, are merely groping to keep up with the staggering problems of finding jobs, houses, schools, teachers, order, transportation systems — and some sense of personal freedom — for these mounting multitudes.

Reston

It is only when we see the Census Bureau's mathematics in terms of human personalities, each with his own special views, problems, and requirements for a decent life, that we begin to wonder how this human problem can be brought under control.

The bureau invites an optimistic thought. The proportionate increase in the American population, it says, was 13.3 per cent in the decade of the 1960's, second smallest in the nation's history, but even so, this increased the population in 10 years by almost 24 million, which is half the total population of Britain, or France or West Germany.

Also, the increase in the 60's was proportionately smaller because that was the decade when the smaller families born in the Depression years of the 1930's reached the child-bearing years. What is ahead for us now is much more serious, for the 40's produced the famous baby-boom and it is this generation that is now coming into the peak years of child-bearing and foreshadowing an even larger proportionate increase in the 70's.

Two Illusions

Two illusions have to be cut away from these statistics: First, that the outlook is for a declining birthrate, and second, that it is the poor who are producing the problem. Even if the birthrate were to drop to replacement levels — two children to a family — the fact is that the number of women in peak childbearing years — 20 to 29 — will increase by nearly 40 per cent by the year 1980. Also, while the very poor tend to have more children than anybody else, the fact is that it is the much more numerous white-middle-class families with their three and four children who are adding most to the rising totals.

In the first hundred years of the U.S. Republic, from the census of 1790 to the census of 1890, the population of the country increased by about 59 million. In the last 20 years alone, it has increased by 51,858,974. Not until 1920 did the population of the U.S. reach its first hundred million, but it passed the second hundred million mark on November 20, 1967, only 47 years later.

On that day, President Lyndon Johnson made an interesting remark. During the American Revolution, he said, the question was: Shall we be a free nation? During the Civil War: Shall we be one nation? During the Great Depression: Shall we be a humane nation? The answer to all three questions, he said, had been "yes," but now the question was, he concluded: Shall we be a great nation?

Since then, a lot of people have been asking whether we will be a "manageable" or "governable" nation if our people and our problems of employment, education, housing, industrialization, crime, race, and urban decay continue to increase at present rates.

This is not the Malthusian nightmare of running out of land and food. In his presidential address to the Population Association of America in 1968, Ansley Cole arged that "even if our population should rise to a billion, its average density would not be very high by European standards."

What Kind of Life

The question, however, is not whether we can eat or survive but what kind of life we would have in such a world, and whether there is enough intelligence and common sense around to organize even the U.S.—let alone the rest of the world, where the population is worse—on such projections?

On the basis of the experience of the last few years, the answer would have to be: Certainly not without radical changes in common attitudes toward family life, economic life, and even toward the purposes of life itself.

But, coming back to the beginning, this is primarily a question of personal attitudes. Governments can do a lot about the need to create over 100 wholly new cities of over 100,000 and 10 new cities of over a million in the next 20 years, but the issue comes back inevitably to the people themselves.

"There appears," says Rufus E. Miles Jr. in the current issue of the Population Bulletin, "to be only one viable approach . . . this is the long, uphill route of encouraging the American people to modify their basic attitudes and behavior so that instead of idealizing large families in the abstract and creating them in flesh and blood, we will prefer small ones and act upon our preferences, so that instead of promoting forms of economic growth which will increasingly pollute our living space, we will insist that we clean up as we go, no matter what the cost . . ."

Looking Back

From The Times of Dec. 8, 1910.

The earnestness of the British Liberal leaders is well illustrated by the feat of Winston Churchill the evening before the elections commenced. He was speaking at Manchester and Balfour was speaking at Grimsby. Wishing to have the last word with the people of Lincolnshire, the Home Secretary took a special train to that county and held a midnight meeting for the fisherfolk. On the road Mr. Churchill received a copy of Balfour's speech and prepared his reply on the train.

'Self-Censorship Spreading Like a Disease in the CBC'

By DAVID LEWIS STEIN

In order to impose censorship, it is not at all necessary to employ a battalion of censors. It is simpler and more effective to have people presenting the news censor themselves.

If they go after only the stories they know will not offend anyone, then the news that people receive will have been thoroughly laundered without anyone ever raising the ugly possibility of censorship.

I have come to believe that a process of self-censorship has begun to spread like a quiet disease through the antiseptic corridors of the CBC.

The crisis in Quebec created a crisis of conscience in the CBC. What is news and what is propaganda? What is objective reporting?

Producers Fired

In the French network, two important producers have already been fired in the struggle to define the role of the CBC. In Ottawa, a leading radio reporter has had to fight off attempts to suspend him. In Toronto, a cool and rather detached documentary of Lenin was "rescheduled" after a couple of MP's complained about it and an incident that should have been laughed at as a bit of bureaucratic silliness inspired a round of soul searching memos.

CBC executives stalwartly deny that business is being conducted in any way but as usual. When I asked Marce Munro, assistant general manager of the English services divison about the possibility of self-censorship, he said, "I deny it backwards, frontwards and sideways. We are broadcasting now as we always have been."

Yet I have talked to enough people at levels below Mr. Munro to believe that, in fact, self-censorship is spreading through the CBC.

One of the reasons I believe this is the nervousness I found among the people who spoke to me. None of them would allow me to quote them directly.

Some were reticent because of loyalty to the corporation but others were just plain scared. One man would only answer yes or no to my questions because there were other people in the room and he was already in trouble. Another man put it even more directly: "I can't tell you any more than that because my job is at stake."

The harrowing of the CBC began on the Thursday night before the War Measures Act went into effect. Like many top newsmen in the country, CBC executives had a good idea of what was coming.

Knowlton Nash, then head of news and public affairs, flew up to Ottawa and orders went out that news and public affairs programs were to avoid any speculation about the FLQ and to avoid man in the street interviews. Preview Commentary was cancelled and the producers of Encounter who had been trying all day to line up a cabinet minister to talk about Quebec were told to avoid the subject. They wound up instead with a panel discussing the Nova Scotia elections with Eldon Wooliams, a Tory MP from Alberta.

After some confusion, Preview Commentary finally went on the air Friday morning but instead of a discussion of Quebec, the program featured a talk about the 25th anniversary of the United Nations and a complaint that the Prime Minister should go down to New York for the UN meeting and not just to see a play or Barbra Streisand. When the program went on the air, the War Measures Act had already been in effect for more than four hours.

When word of the changes in Encounter got out on Thursday night, newspaper reporters called CBC president George Davidson.

Instead of defending his actions as simply common sense caution in an extraordinary situation, Davidson made what sounded like an attack on his own news staff. He told the newspaper reporters he had ordered the CBC newsroom to "cool it" and to stick to the "real, hard news."

Such a statement from Davidson would have frayed nerves at the best of times. In the panicky early hours of the War Measures Act, it inspired outrage in the CBC newsroom.

The atmosphere in the newsroom got so overheated that there was even brief talk of a walkout.

Never Go Back

But as one man who was there put it, "We realized that if we walked out in the middle of the biggest story of the decade, we'd never be able to walk in again."

When Larry Zolf of Weekend took a film crew over to Justice Minister John Turner, the justice minister said the sections of the act dealing with censorship and deportation had not been invoked. As long as the CBC didn't sound like it was communicating messages for the FLQ, there would be no problems.

The CBC lawyers viewed the film and apparently decided that they knew better than Turner what the act meant and that, in fact, something like censorship had, indeed gone into effect. Turner sounded in part like he was giving a statement of government confidence in the competence of the CBC. He said the CBC could broadcast his statement as long as it was shown unedited.

Cautious

This is a common enough deal for politicians to make when they have something important to say and want to make sure that their message gets across at full strength.

But the CBC decided not to broadcast Turner's statement and the only clarification that personnel got was a memo from a lawyer that advised them to remain extremely cautious.

I talked to some of the people in charge of public affairs shows and they found the very idea that some members of their staffs might feel intimidated and be practising self-censorship absurd. One executive producer called it "a lot of garbage."

But when I talked to people lower down in the hierarchy, people who actually go out into the streets with cameras and microphones they said that of course they were practising self-censorship. It was only common sense to do so.

For example one producer had taped an interview with a member of the FLQ before the War Measures Act went into effect and he wanted to broadcast it a couple of weeks later.

A CBC lawyer said there was nothing in the tape that might be construed as breaking the War Measures Act. The CBC executives might still have killed the program on the grounds that it was in questionable taste.

They didn't do anything as straightforward as that, though. Instead, only one half hour before the show was to go on the air, the producer was told that it was too "tendentious" and he was ordered to change it. How do you defend yourself against a charge of being "tendentious?"

GEORGE DAVIDSON

Another producer now finds that every idea is challenged. Nobody ever says that a program shouldn't be done because it might provoke the politicians or arouse the public. Instead, the producer is asked, "Do you think this idea is in good taste? Would it be wise to put it on now? If we do this program, what will that do for the image of the CBC?"

There are no rules and nothing has been committed to writing. So the producers find themselves struggling with executives who have suddenly turned cold and conservative. The only defence against this is to become conservative too.

One man in a position to judge such things described the malaise of the CBC this way: "The CBC is a news medium married to an industry married to a civil service bureaucracy. It can probably play two of these roles at the same time but it cannot play all three roles at the same time."

Anticipate

At a crucial stage in the history of the CBC, in the early days of the War Measures Act, it seems to me that George Davidson chose to play the civil servant bureaucrat. And smart civil servants get to be important civil servants by anticipating what politicians want and acting before the politicians get a chance to issue the orders.

I believe Davidson called for "restraint" not because the cabinet demanded it but because he wanted to make sure the cabinet had no grounds for publicly questioning the CBC. Instead of asserting his independence as the head of a crown corporation, he tacitly accepted the possibility of political interference.

I have been talking about an attitude of people who work for the CBC. I believe that they have been intimidated by management and they are practicing self-censorship and that we will all soon be very much aware of it.

GM Displays Its Arrogance

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

General Motors Corp. may have a good argument for refusing parity with its United States workers to its Canadian workers, particularly because the Canadian cost of living has not risen nearly as rapidly as the U.S. cost of living, and because Canadian workers do not in general enjoy wage parity with their U.S. counterparts.

General Motors cannot, however, adduce any such logical arguments to support its refusal to make French the working language at its assembly plant in Ste. Therese, Quebec.

There are 2,400 United Auto Workers now on strike at Ste. Therese, and one thing they insist shall be in any contract under which they return to work is that French be the official language of work. The arguments they make are just — both socially just and economically just.

Of their number, 95 per cent are French Canadian. Yet most of the foremen and executives at the Quebec plant speak English only, so that assembly line workers are forced to have all their communications with the management in English. Employees who speak French only are denied promotions and barred from certain jobs. Employees who speak English only are not barred from promotion or special jobs.

The chairman of the grievance committee, incredible as it may seem, does not speak French. Even more incredible, the only official version of the labor contract to date has been English.

The company has given, probably unintentionally, a measure of its arrogance in the two concessions it has offered on the language issue. It has said it will recognize the French version of the contract as official and cover the cost of simultaneous interpretation at bargaining sessions.

Its plant information officer, Andre Arnoldi, offered another piece of arrogance. "No one is denied the right to speak French," he said.

That's correct. They are not gagged. They are only denied the right to bargain and handle grievances in their promotion or to be admitted to special jobs, the right to own language, the right to opportunities that ought to be open — on skills and merit alone — to every worker in this country.

When the plant was being set up, it can be understood that the management would bring along English-speaking management and foremen, because there did not then exist a pool of skilled workers who were French-speaking. But the plant has been operating for five years. If its management was doing its job, if it was not lazy and not bigoted, it ought now to be able to staff almost all of its foremen posts from among the 95 per cent of its employees who speak French. It ought to have searched out likely French-Canadian management.

Translate the situation to Oshawa. Suppose that the French-owned Michelin Tire Corp. had set up a plant in Oshawa; suppose that it had brought in French-speaking management and foremen; suppose that five years later most of its management and foremen and inspectors were still French-speaking; suppose when they sat down to bargain with their employees they insisted on speaking French (and felt very big and generous that they had finally offered simultaneous translation and recognition of a contract written in English); suppose that they denied promotion to their English-speaking employees — and thereby limited the capacity of those employees to rise in the job and increase the size of their pay envelopes.

What kind of picket lines would we be seeing in Oshawa?

In fact, Michelin Tire has set up business in Canada. In Nova Scotia. The language of the work is English.

It will be wholly wrong and unjust if General Motors does not make French the working language at Ste. Therese.

ULTRASONICS

You may not get deaf as you get older, but you will certainly lose your ability to hear high-pitched sounds. Few people over 60 can hear anything above 8,000 cycles per second (c-s).

Apart from missing the chink of the bat's call (around 15,000 c-s) they are not particularly discommoded, since middle C of the piano is 256 c-s and the highest note of the piccolo is no more than 4,752 c-s.

Young people can hear sounds as high as 20,000 c-s or even higher, and dogs can hear sounds no human ear can ever hope to bear.

But it doesn't stop there, of course, and in recent years ultrasonic waves — waves beyond the range of any ear — have become important (don't confuse ultrasonic with supersonic, which simply means faster than sound).

Like ordinary sound waves, ultrasonic waves are pressure waves in air or water and in principle can be made in the same way.

But in practice dimensions soon get unmanageably small, and the only simple way of generating ultrasonic waves is with the Galton whistle, the well-known inaudible dog-call. Anything more powerful than this calls for, special and complex equipment.

Why bother?

First, because vibrations of this type, acting throughout the whole body of the gas or liquid they traverse, have very powerful and characteristic effects if sufficiently intense. At these intensities the frequency needs to be well away from the audible range so as to avoid harm to everybody within earshot.

Practical applications include emulsification, degassing, and grain-refining of castings.

Ultrasonic drilling is of special interest. Since the drill-head goes to and fro rather than round and round, holes of any cross-section can be drilled, in a curve if necessary.

Solder a coin on to the drill-head and, with the help of a little emery powder, you can cut a reproduction of that coin, in fine detail, on every window-pane you can reach.

For the great thing about ultrasonic drilling is that the harder the substance, the easier it is to drill.

Second, because the higher the frequency the easier it is for the waves to be focussed and used as a beam. In this form they can be used to gather and give information, and high intensities are not involved.

Echo-sounding, to measure the depth of the sea, or to detect fish, whales or submarines, uses a beam of ultrasonic pulses whose reflection from the object is picked up and timed.

The bat uses exactly the same technique, and a guide for the blind was developed along these lines nearly 50 years ago but never caught on. It has recently been reinvented. (Radar does the same thing using wireless waves.)

Another use is for measuring the thickness of an object accessible from one side only. It is the only known method for use with non-metallic objects.

Taking a Trip on Sound

By NORMAN HARTLEY

TORONTO — Good news from the underground. Mood modification by hallucinogenic drugs like LSD may be on the way out. But before you sigh with relief, take a look at what may be coming next.

The group name is "electronic stimulation," a vague, not very scientific, generalization covering a number of electrical and electronic devices which produce "highs" or take the user into uncharted sensations.

In the group are concepts like the sound-go-round, the black box, bio-feedback training, brain-fighting, white sound and direct-impulse brain stimulation.

Many of the devices already exist—both in university laboratories and "on the street." For others, the hardware and the ideas exist and it is only a matter of time before they are put together.

The electronics field fascinates many young people who are looking for other ways to go into "inner space" than mind-altering drugs.

They see it as the next stage after drugs: a cleaner, simpler, safer way of controlling and examining their internal states.

"A sound-go-round is like a record player, really. Stereo. Two channels. But instead of one speaker on each channel, there are eight. You fix eight speakers at the top of the room and eight at the bottom and connect them so that on one channel, the sound is moving randomly clockwise and on the other randomly anti-clockwise.

"What happens is that your audio senses are totally distorted because you are completely enveloped and there is no source of sound any more. If you do it with eight-track you can have 64 speakers. You can place them randomly too. You can put yourself inside a geodesic dome with a speaker in the middle of each triangle and there you are suspended in the middle."

What kind of a trip is it? What is it like to be inside such an envelope of sound?

"There's mood change of course. First of all you find yourself saying, What the heck's going on," then in a little while you start to understand what's happening mechanically. Then you start to feel what's happening to you environmentally.

"You get a totally new understanding of music. A new feel of it."

A professor of behavioral science at York University had this to say about Edgar's interests:

"It figures. The effect would be very powerful. One of the ways you locate your own body in time and space is by relating it to the origin of sounds; if you disguise the source of sound like that, you set your body free in one sense."

Like Edgar, the behavioral scientist is anxious not to be quoted by name. Edgar is worried about possible patent protection and also about hassles with those who do not understand his work.

The behavioral scientist is more concerned with not making statements that will make him sound foolish. "It's a very tentative area. There's not much definite yet."

When you start inquiring about electronic stimulation around Yorkville, one thing strikes you immediately.

People who are interested have imaginations that are completely unfettered by convention. Their fantasies run free. Suggest any concept and their first reaction will not be "that's impossible" but "wow, if you can do that, maybe you can also do this."

Joshua, another long-haired, denim-dressed, freaky-looking experimenter, believes this is partly why many advances in drug knowledge came out of underground laboratories.

"You can just play around. Nobody cares if you make mistakes. There's no prestige problems or having to worry about morality or proper data control like in the universities. You just fiddle about with ideas. You can turn up some pretty interesting things like that."

One difference from underground drug research is that there are no legal problems.

"They can't bust you for having a stereo set — at least not yet," Edgar says.

But sound-go-rounds are only a small part of the story. One area where a lot of interest is concentrated is bio-feedback training, or electronic yoga as it has been nicknamed in the United States.

BFT is a way of seeking control over your own internal states of feeling by training yourself to influence the electrical activity of your own brain.

Research has identified four primary brain-wave patterns — alpha, beta, delta and theta, each operating on a different frequency.

It was also discovered that a person can be trained to produce intentionally the most prominent pattern — alpha waves — by self induction of a state that has been described as "alertness, combined with a feeling of serenity, drifting and detachment."

The black box is the latest refinement in training devices, using an audio feedback tone. It consists of five electrodes which are attached to the head, earphones — and a black box. With it, a person can train himself in four or five hours to sustain or repress alpha waves at will.

Research is going on among other places at universities in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Chicago and New York but it is also going on in Toronto "on the street."

Public Hearing Set In Nursing Home Bid

The next step toward building a $4 million retirement centre on the site of the former Mountain View home, at Cadboro Bay and Bowker, will be taken on Dec. 21.

At 7:30 p.m. that day a public hearing will be held in Oak Bay municipal hall on National Nursing Homes Ltd.'s bid to build a centre that would contain 200 guest rooms and 36 de luxe suites.

The public hearing is necessary to change the current bylaw which restricts land usage to apartment construction.

At Monday's council meeting, on the suggestion of Mayor Frances Elford, council stipulated that no part of the construction could rise more than 25 feet higher than the land contour. It also agreed that the back of the building must be 125 feet from the rear line of the property on Cranmore.

BYLAW TABLED

Another zoning bylaw which would have paved the way for construction of a nine-story apartment house on Beach, bewteen the Rudyard Kipling and Beresford Manor was tabled.

Acting on a motion by Ald. Norman Pimlott, council agreed that the bylaw should be considered by the incoming 1971 council.

Several people attended the meeting to protest the issue and were assured by the mayor that it was unlikely that a public hearing would be heard until "well into 1971."

Ald. Brian Smith objected to the developer's plans to have a traffic entrance on Beach Drive, because it would add to congestion on the well-travelled road.

24 TO LOSE HOMES

He again pointed out that the consturction would mean the loss of homes for 24 people of moderate means in favor of providing 56 high-income units.

Council's A committee will study a proposal by Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi that a training and work plan be set up in Oak Bay for persons receiving social assistance.

Designed to help people who are eligible for enrolment in upgrading or vocational training Manpower programs, the plan would provide learning and working situations as a preparation for vocational training or employment.

Candidates would receive full pay for the work portion of their training, the costs being shared between the municipality and the province.

BUDGET APPROVED

Council approved the provisional budget of the Greater Victoria Public Library Board.

Mayor Elford said approval meant that Oak Bay undertook to pay its share of the costs of the first three months of operation in 1971.

"I notice that the budget includes 12 months' operating costs for an Oak Bay branch and a second Saanich branch. Neither branch would be in operation for the entire year."

She also noted that the budget's salary total did not include any increases that might be granted in 1971.

In other business, council:

● Referred to A committee for study a recommendation by the United Church of Canada that a Landlord and Tenant Grievance Board be set up.

● Endorsed the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce's brief, urging pressure to locate the proposed West Coast Marine Scientific Institute in Victoria.

● Gave approval for young members of the Seventh Day Adventist Church to sing carols and solicit donations in Oak Bay during the pre-Christmas season.

● Adopted a bylaw calling for increased fire protection for tenants of apartment houses.

● Referred a request from Wade, Stockdill, Armour and Blewett to be considered as architects for the centennial branch libraries to the public library board and the Greater Victoria Centennial Committee in 1971.

SAANICH EMPLOYEES GIVEN DEC. 24 OFF

Saanich municipal employees will get the day before Christmas off.

Council agreed to this Monday night, after earlier deciding the employees would have half that day off.

Boxing Day falls on a Saturday this year. But Saanich employees do not have in their union agreements a provision for a day in lieu when a statutory holiday falls on a non-working day.

Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt employees have this provision and are taking the day before Christmas off, council was told.

Mayor Hugh Curtis told council that no representations were made to him "formally or informally" but he considered it more sensible and in the spirit of Christmas to give the day off.

Municipal Pension Increases Approved by Saanich Council

Saanich council approved a finance committee recommendation Monday night endorsing new arrangements for municipal pensions.

The change is expected to cost the municipality about $40,000 a year.

The pensions report was recommended by the municipal advisory committee on pensions of the Union of B.C. Municipalities. The executive of the UBCM has adopted the report which will be submitted to the provincial government for implementation.

Victoria Ald. Percy Frampton has said the changes will cost the city an extra $70,000 a year.

Based on the highest nine-year average monthly salary, a list of examples shows increases ranging from $6 to $285 a month and percentage increased from a low of 8 per cent to a high of 54 per cent.

A person with $288 for his highest nine-year average montly salary would get $6 more while a person at $1,192 would get $285 more.

On a percentage basis, the $524 a month a person would get 8 per cent more while the $1,192 a month person would get 54 per cent more.

This will produce pensions, excluding the Canada Pension Plan, of $49 a month for the lowest-paid person to $814 a month for the highest-paid person.

Quiz Team Adds 2 Wins

University of Victoria's four-man quiz team rolled up two more victories in Ottawa over the weekend.

Uvic defeated Bishop's University of Lennoxville, Que., by a score of 295-35 and University of Calgary 370-0.

The matches are being taped by the Canadian Television network for broadcast early in 1971.

Uvic had previously defeated McGill and Waterloo in November. Each match means $1,000 in scholarship funds to the winner and $500 to the loser. A single defeat knocks a school out of the competition.

Members of the Uvic team are Bruce Izard, Dennis Johnson, Robert McDougall, all of Victoria, and Glen Paruk of Port Alberni. Prof. Alfred Loft of the history department is the coach.

The team will return to Ottawa in January for two more matches, one against the Royal Military college, Kingston.

'BOOBY TRAP' CALLED OFF

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UPI) — Topless entertainment in the form of three young female musicians known as "The Booby Trap" was cancelled Monday by the owners of The Mad Russian because of fear of a possible police raid.

One of the owners, Henry Starno, 28, said the evening performance was called off on the advice of an attorney, who said the show would be considered "lewd" by law.

Job Loss Seen Without Sea Lab

Possible location of a new federal institute of oceanography in Vancouver might cause a reduction of 200 to 300 jobs in Victoria, the city's brief to Ottawa says.

The brief, approved Monday by council, maintains that by passing up Victoria, the federal government would cause a cumulative reduction of jobs that began with defence spending cuts in 1961. The city decided to press for location of the institute here after a high federal civil servant indicated the planned institute might be located in Vancouver to take advantage of marine industries and university facilities there.

Victoria needs the development, the brief contends. "By contrast Vancouver has already reached the stage of self-sustaining growth and is one of the few regions in Canada that does not need federal industrial investment."

The brief said that Victoria boasts a good choice of federally-owned land on the waterfront, a tradition of marine activities, and a basic number of marine industries.

The brief said that between 1961 and 1967 department of defence spending cutbacks have reduced military personnel here by 24.4 per cent and civilian by 4.9 per cent. It added that this decline has continued steadily since 1967.

The institute would "at least partially offset the reduction in employment opportunities precipitated by the decrease in defence personnel."

"Conversely, to centralize other federal government marine activities elsewhere would further reduce direct employment in this area by 200-300 and contribute to the erosion of the economic base."

The brief lists industries that would benefit a new institute, including the Victoria Machinery Depot, Yarrows Shipyards, H.M.C. Dockyard, and about 20 smaller firms.

Hissing Hole Confounds Geologists

HARVEY, N.D. (AP) — A mysterious "hissing hole" in the ground on a farm near Harvey is becoming a local attraction. Even geologists are puzzled.

Sylvinus Lesmeister says he discovered the hole near his garage Nov. 23, gas was escaping from it, making a hissing sound.

"Apparently it's just air," Lesmeister said.

The hole behaves similar to a geyser, spewing gas for 24 to 48 hours, stops for a day or two before starting again.

The hole, Lesmeister said, is about four inches in diameter, but nobody knows how deep.

"We stuck a 16-foot stake down there and it didn't reach bottom," he said.

BUSINESS and FINANCE

Editor: G. S. Kent

Chieftain

Chieftain Development Co. Ltd. reports net income of $2.5 million for the first nine months of 1970 compared with $258,600 in the corresponding period last year.

The increase resulted from a special credit of $2 million being added to net income, coming from a gain on the disposal of shares from Blue Crown Inc., a gain in the disposal of assets from a Chieftain division and a loss on the sale of a subsidiary company.

Income in the first nine months before interest and special credits was $240,300, compared with $188,400 in 1969.

M. Leaf Gardens

Maple Leaf Gardens Ltd. has reported a profit before extraordinary items of $913,360 or $1.24 a share for the year ended Aug. 31, compared with $911,770 or $1.24 a share a year earlier.

Excluded from this year's profit is a gain of $952,000 from the sale of National Hockey League franchise rights to Buffalo and Vancouver. Last year's profit excludes a gain of $76,025 on the sale of property.

Revenue was $6.79 million, up from $6.47 million.

Silver Mark

An option on 60 per cent interest in about 500 acres of copper prospect near Tucson, Ariz., has been acquired by a wholly-owned subsidiary of Silver Mark Mines Ltd.

A road has been completed and a percussion drilling program started, with a target of 5,000 feet by the end of the month. Chip samples have been sent in for assay.

The agreement calls for payment of $10,000 by next Aug. 9, $25,000 worth of work by Nov. 9, 1971, and $50,000 in work by Nov. 9, 1972.

Cdn. Dividends

Cash payouts by Canadian corporations during 1970 have set a record—more than double the amount paid 10 years ago and the 12th consecutive year of increase.

Bongard Leslie and Co. Ltd. reports that despite generally lower earnings this year, companies paid a total $1.63 billion, up from $1.57 billion last year and $770.5 million in 1960.

Miscellaneous industrial companies paid fractionally lower dividends this year than last, but the other three groups—utilities, mines and institutions—made record payments.

Industrials paid $745 million, utilities $269 million, mines $367 million and institutions $247 million.

Javelin Subsidiary Purchases Brewery

OTTAWA (CP) — A subsidiary of Canadian Javelin Ltd., St. John's, Nfld., says it has purchased Atlantic Brewery Ltd. Stephenville, Nfld., for $1,107,000.

The brewery was acquired by Bison Petroleums and Minerals Ltd., Ottawa, and will be operated as a subsidiary under the name of the Bison Brewery Co. Ltd.

R. B. Major, Bison Petroleum president; said an offer providing for two separate payments has been approved by the Royal Bank of Canada, the Montreal Trust Co., the Canadian Acceptance Corp. and the Industrial Acceptance Corp. Ltd.

Assets of the brewery will be purchased with the issue of five-year, first-mortgage bonds with a principal value of $700,000. The bonds will automatically convert at maturity into common shares of Bison Petrocent, payable semi-annually.

Bison Petroleums will also give the government of Newfoundland $407,000 in interest-free revenue bonds payable in equal instalments over a 10-year period.

Atlantic Brewery was started in 1968 and closed after less than a year of operation. The company owed the government about $400,000 in beer taxes when it closed.

Mr. Major said appraised value of the buildings and land is about $4 million.

Ben Ginter, owner of a brewery in British Columbia, had been negotiating to buy the Stephenville operation but withdrew, stating the price was too high.

EEC Deaf to Canada Plea

BRUSSELS (CP) — Canada's campaign to get the European Economic Community to extend the proposed tariff transition period on British entry into the trade community appears likely to bring little result.

But the recent excursions of Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin and External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp through EEC land may yet yield a worthwhile dividend: making Europeans more aware of the concern of outsiders that an integrated Europe will turn protectionist.

A related concern expressed by Sharp last week that Europe and the United States will drift into an all-out war, perhaps more to the detriment of innocent bystanders than themselves—drew a sympathetic response from NATO Secretary-General Manlio Brosio. He assured Sharp at a meeting of NATO foreign ministers that it would be studied by the NATO secretariat.

Sharp's lead for an extended transition period following Britain's accession to the Economic Community seemed to have little impact with the organization itself, however.

"I would be very surprised," said an EEC spokesman when asked whether Canada's intervention was likely to cause a change in present plans. "There is not a great deal of sympathy with Canada's plight," he added candidly.

WANT TO CATCH UP

The Canadian standard of loving is higher than that of Europe, he noted, the suggestion being that Canada shouldn't begrudge Europe an opportunity to catch up.

The spokesman also said Canada needn't suffer from British membership in the EEC. Its loss of a preferential position in the British market should be offset by Britain's accession to an economic system that is growing at three times the pace of the British economy.

This will impart a buoyancy to the British economy, so the argument goes, that figures to make Britain a better market for Canadian goods than ever. And the EEC with Britain in its fold intended to remain liberal in trade outlook.

The informal timetable for British entry actually provides a longer period of adjustment than the proposed five years Britain will have in which to move into conformity with the Economic Community's external tariff.

According to the timetable, the hard bargaining between Britain and the EEC will be finished around the middle of next year, with the treaty being signed around the beginning of 1972.

Allow a year for treaty ratifications. Only after that, say, Jan. 1, 1973, would the transition period begin. Britain would be a full EEC member for tariff purposes at the outset of 1978.

The EEC has agreed to make special provision for New Zealand dairy products and Caribbean sugar, since the economies of whole countries depend on their easy access to the British market.

Canada doesn't pretend that it stands to be hit as hard by British entry as these countries would be. Nevertheless, it could be hurt by the disruptive effect of a reversal in its current advantageous position in the British market, said Sharp.

Last year, Canada exported more than $1,100 million worth of goods to Britain, and only $823 million worth to all six present members of the EEC—France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg. In both cases, the bulk of exports consisted of raw materials and foodstuffs.

Appeal Set On Suspension

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Corporation of British Columbia Coast Pilots said Monday it will file an appeal on behalf of Captain D. G. Crabbe of Victoria, whose licence has been suspended for 15 months.

Crabbe was the pilot aboard the Sergey Yesenin, a Soviet freighter which collided with the B.C. government ferry Queen of Victoria, Aug. 2. Three ferry passengers were killed.

A federal inquiry Thursday cited Crabbe for "reckless' conduct and bad judgment and ordered his licence suspended for 15 months.

Captain J. Barry Cook, president of the pilots' association, said Monday the appeal, against both the suspension of Capt. Crabbe's licence and the findings of the commission, would be filed today or Wednesday in Exchequer Court in Vancouver or in Ottawa.

Meanwhile, lawyers studied the 57-page report of the collision inquiry as they continued work on damage suits filed after the two vessels collided in Active Pass, between Vancouver Island and the mainland.

The largest single claim is that by the B.C. government covering damage to the ferry —close to $600,000. Other claims involve deaths, damage to cars and property on the ferry and the Soviet ship.

No dates have been set for hearing on any of the actions, nor has a date been set by the commission to determine who will pay the costs of the lengthy inquiry.

New Contract Agreed For Swift Employees

TORONTO (CP) — Negotiators for Swift Canadian Co. Ltd. and its employees in five Canadian cities have reached agreement on a new contract four months before the present one expires.

Officials said Monday the agreement, if ratified by the 2,000 workers in Toronto, Winnipeg, Edmonton, Vancouver and Moncton, would provide wage increases of more than 30 per cent over three years.

The first increase in the contract, which would replace a pact which expires April 1, calls for an increase of 29 cents an hour for men and up to 44 cents for women to bring them to parity effective Jan. 4, 1971.

Management and union officials said the agreement was achieved in one week of bargaining between the company and five locals of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers Union.

The contract terms will be submitted to union members in the cities involved for a ratification vote to be completed by Thursday night.

The settlement is expected to set a pattern for 8,000 employees at Canada Packers Ltd. in Toronto, Burns Foods Ltd. in Calgary and Intercontinental Packers Ltd. in Saskatoon.

The current base rate for Swift workers is $3.04 for women and $3.17 for men. Both will earn $3.46 an hour under the first increases effective Jan. 4, 1971.

A second general increase of 27 cents an hour will be paid April 30, 1972, with the final instalment of 26 cents to come on April 2, 1973.

Police May Turn Night Into Day

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — A battery operated device that can amplify light up to 48,000 times to turn night into day may help swing the pendulum of peril more in favor of police.

The new device can project on to its own screen a television-like image of what it spots in the dark. It can also be used with cameras to take pictures for evidence.

Called Star-Tron, it was developed by the General Ordnance Equipment Corp. of Pittsburgh, Pa., a member of the Smith and Wesson Law Enforcement Group.

Smith and Wesson is introducing the device to police departments as a means of night-time observation.

The device does not need complicated infra-red light or detectable spotlights. It can be adjusted for changes in light, magnification and range, officials said.

They said it has a basic sight range similar to that of the human eye in daylight and can amplify the lowest intensity light.

GASTOWN TO BECOME AN HISTORIC SITE

Premier Bennett said Monday the provincial government will delay action which might close down the Gastown shopping district of Vancouver on Sundays.

The area is expected to be designated a provincial historic site before long, thus enabling stores to stay open Sundays.

The threat of Sunday closure developed a few weeks ago after the Vancouver city prosecutor received complaints about Sunday openings in Gastown.

Opposition Hits Regional Expansion Plan

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition critics accused the government Monday of stretching its regional expansion program to an absurd limit in the budget brought down last Thursday by Finance Minister E. J. Benson.

"It would make more sense and there would be less paper work if the government would state which areas of Canada are not designated under the regional development program," Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo) told the Commons as debate continued on the budget.

Nearing Self-Destruction Point

The New Democrat financial critic said the program has become a comedy, never very successful at creating jobs in depressed areas and now reaching a point where it could be self-defeating.

Of particular concern to the opposition were the budget decisions to include Montreal in a new expansion region and to increase the size of incentive grants to industries settling in designated areas of slow growth.

Conservative finance critic Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West) noted that 99 per cent of the population of Quebec will live in designated areas.

Mr. Saltsman went further to suggest that "virtually all of Canada has been designated."

Not only Quebec but the entire Atlantic region, all Manitoba and large parts of Ontario, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia have been included.

Montreal Inclusion Condemned

Walter Carter (PC—St. John's West) said including Montreal in the program would destroy its value in the Atlantic provinces by equalizing the incentive to locate industries in them.

Mr. Saltsman also criticized the government plan to increase incentive grants to a maximum of 35 per cent of capital costs from 25 per cent, with an additional $7,000 for each new job created. Grants in the new region, taking in Montreal and the three southeastern Ontario counties of Prescott, Stormont and Glengarry, would be of up to 10 per cent of capital costs.

Mr. Saltsman said the country would be better off to foster regional development through creation of the long-awaited and publicly-owned Canada development corporation.

The government's plans, detailed Friday by Regional Expansion Minister Jean Marchand, call for grants of $130 million in the next few years and are intended to create $630 million worth of new and expanded manufacturing and processing industries employing 30,000 workers.

Opposition MPs also criticized the government for what they called a failure to reduce personal income taxes.

Mr. Lambert said the government should have removed the three-per-cent surcharge on income taxes.

Opposition Offers Amendments

Mr. Lambert offered an amendment to the government motion to accept the budget that would add that the House "deplores the abysmal failure of the government" to reduce unemployment and poverty by stimulating the economy.

Mr. Saltsman added an amendment urging that personal income tax exemptions be raised to $2,000 for a single person and $4,000 for a couple.

Charles Arthur Gauthier protested that too much government expenditure goes for administration, not enough to help the needy. He added that more aid should be directed to Quebec farmers who have received less than those elsewhere in the country.

Liberal Allan Sulatycky (Rocky Mountain) felt confident the budget would "strike with pinpoint accuracy at areas of high unemployment problems."

Hubert Badanai (L—Fort William) said opposition criticis did not make sense and that no practicable alternatives had been offered.

George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings) returned to his favorite proposals for stimulation of the economy: pressure on banks to lower interest rates, tax rebates to firms improving their productivity and rejection of a white paper on taxation proposal to increase the corporation tax on revenues of less than $35,000 to 50 per cent from 21 per cent.

Ex-Anchorman Has No Regrets

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC broadcaster Frank Reynolds expressed mixed emotions here in his last appearance as the television network's evening news anchorman.

"I would prefer to pick my own time to leave," said Reynolds, anchorman for the last 2½ years who will be replaced Monday by former CBS announcer Harry Reasoner.

"But I'm not going to suggest that I am completely happy about what has happened to me. For it is also the truth that I don't like it one bit, and see no reason to pretend that I do."

But Reynolds, who will remain at ABC as a special correspondent, said he had "no quarrel with the judgment that it is time for a change."

Struggle Likely For E. Pakistan

KARACHI (AP) — East Pakistan's Awami League appeared headed today for a majority in the new National Assembly, promising a struggle with President Yahya Khan over the league's demands that the eastern province be freed of the central government's domination.

After years of jail and the political wilderness, the results of Monday's election made the league's 48-year-old leader, Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, the central figure in Pakistani politics.

The league virtually swept the polls in the Bengali-speaking East, a densely populated area of 70 million people. It was expected to win more than 160 of the 313 assembly seats.

In the other half of the country, the People's party headed by leftist Zulfikar Ali Bhutto was leading in the races for 82 of the 144 seats allotted West Pakistan. Bhutto, a former foreign minister, advocates something he calls "Islamic socialism" and closer ties with China.

LESSON TO THE WEST

The Awami League victory was a concrete demonstration of East Pakistan's acute dissatisfaction with the Urdu-speaking West Pakistanis who dominate Yahya Khan's military regime and the central government.

For a generation, the Bengalis have complained that the central government uses the foreign exchange earned from East Pakistan's jute to develop the western province. And the sluggishness with which the government responded to the cyclone and tidal wave disaster in East Pakistan last month was a new demonstration to the Bengalis of the lack of concern for them in Rawalpindi and Karachi.

The National Assembly's first task will be to write a new constitution, and Mujib, as the Awami League leader is known, made autonomy for East Pakistan the chief plank in his platform. But President Yahya Khan has said he will veto any constitution that does not preserve the "integrity" of the nation, and Mujib and his supporters have been modifying their aims.

Mujib's program originally called for complete autonomy, the right to raise a provincial army, and provincial control of foreign trade; the central government would have been concerned only with defence, foreign affairs and currency.

Recently the Awami leaders have been saying they might agree to taxation powers for the central legislature. They have also dropped a demand for creation of two states, East and West Pakisaan.

Tempestuous Singer To Teach

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Renowned soprano Maria Callas will teach a two-week course in operatic interpretation at the Curtis Institute of Music, it was announced here.

Rudolph Serkin, institute director, said the tempestuous singer will direct operatic scenes and coach aspiring singers during the session next February.

"She is eminently suited to give her art to the other generations," Serkin said. "This practice in times gone by was quite customary, that is, as artist would give courses to younger performers."

Serkin indicated he hoped the practice would be revived, specially with the help of "this ideally suited artist."

Merge Now Or Pay For It

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

If an order from the provincial government is the only way to get Greater Victoria municipalities to amalgamate, that order should be given now.

This is the view of Victoria Alderman Clyde Savage who believes the present system of separate municipalities under a "vague" regional government is only creating more and more parochialism.

No form of real amalgamation ever takes place without the provincial minister of municipal affairs saying it must, Savage says.

Having sat as an alternate member of the capital regional board for the last year, he believes any accomplishments by the region to date have been made only in spite of "impossible political influence."

A regional government would not be suited to govern the whole area, he says.

"It is my view that urban government and rural government are two entirely different forms of government and must of necessity be (handled) by totally different methods."

The answer, says Savage, is some form of metro government for the urban area comprised of Victoria, Oak Bay, part of Saanich and Esquimalt, with the regional government in charge of all rural areas as well as matters that effect both areas crucially.

Furthermore, the new arrangement must be "so set up that complete co-operation between them must result.

"The minister, the capital regional district and the elected officials of municipal governments will probably respond that this is what is happening, and there is evidence that some progress has been made in this direction. But I maintain that time is of the essence, and the public cannot afford the slow buggy ride which they are getting."

At present, Savage says, the terms of reference for the regional government are "incomplete, vague and entirely without authority, and create parochial government at its worst. . . ."

With a growing regional government bureaucracy there should be "some decrease in costs of local government. However, this is not the case as costs are also increasing at the municipal level. I can see no reason for two areas of government not co-operating to consolidate these costs.

"It is my contention that the public, who pays for these costs, is being taken down the garden path with spiralling costs unparalleled in local government."

Savage points to a recent Victoria initiative to get the region and the province to come together and study transportation needs for the whole area.

The result was that the city was "told we were moving in isolation, and that the capital regional district had already moved ahead in this field. There can be no progress unless all parties concerned work together."

Another situation that illustrates the problem: "I contend that the hospital situation is intolerable to our society, and would not be in this condition if the capital regional district had the authority to make a decision without outside influences interfering."

The provincial government, he says, is following a course which lets "the chips fall as they may, hoping in due course that problems will be solved, but in my mind the time has come for more concrete plans and action.

"The several municipalities are not going to agree to any amalgamation of services, which is quite evident from the remarks and discussions of the various councils," he says.

"It is time that the provincial government shows some leadership in setting up a workable combination of regional and municipal government that can plan the future for this area."

Chief Refuses To Close Down 'Unsound Hall'

Saanich Fire Chief Joseph Sutherland said today his department has "no intention" of taking action to close a community hall in Gordon Head "unless someone can show me it's necessary."

He made the comment after the municipal building department recommended to council that the Gordon Head Mutual Improvement Society hall, Tyndall Avenue, be demolished on the grounds it is unsafe.

A section of the Fire Marshal Act provides for inspection and, if a fire would endanger life or property, ordering destruction or repair of the building.

Concern expressed by the building department was about structural aspects and fear of collapse. A dance is scheduled for New Year's Eve, after which the hall is to be closed with a new municipal facility opening nearby in late January.

'NOT TOO UNHAPPY'

Sutherland said his department looked at the hall in the summer and "it didn't look too bad." There was concern about a rear exit but because the hall was due to come to an end anyway, "we said if they put an exit sign at the rear and a couple of extinguishers we were not too unhappy."

He described the furnace room as "one of the best of community halls in the lower Island. From a fire safety standpoint, we are not too concerned."

He also said there are time delays even if the fire department takes action. First, a notice is issued and then there are 10 days to appeal to the fire marshal who has to come from Vancouver to make an inspection and then it can go to court. He didn't know if activites at the hall would have to cease "until all this is over."

Council has tabled the issue for viewing, a step in the demolition procedure. Even if demolition is ordered, there is a 30-day notice period.

A report by Joseph Barber-Starkey, municipal development engineer, said a letter was sent to the society recommending group activities be discontined because of the "unsound" state of the hall. While a date could not be foretold for a structural failure, it is a hazard and demolition was recommended.

The hall was viewed by officials of the building and

SUTHERLAND
. . . no fire threat

Society president Jack Groves told council that other than a fire marshal's inspection, after which action was taken, the group had received no notice the building was in bad shape.

'TALKED OUT OF IT'

He said all activities have been cancelled except a dog obedience class and a New Year's Eve dance. After the beginning of the year it was planned to voluntarily close the hall.

The new Gordon Head swimming pool and community centre on the Lambrick Estate, not far away, is to open Jan. 23.

Ald. William Noel disagreed with the finding that the building is unsound and wanted to know more. Ald. Alan Newberry asked why action wasn't taken by municipal officials before now.

Starkey said the fire chief was going to take action several months ago "but was talked out of it pending construction of the new hall."

Mayor Hugh Curtis said he is not prepared to "carry on my conscience" a possible tragedy at the planned dance.

A society member, W. E. Beck, told council he objects "strongly and questions the qualifications" of those who made the inspection and asked if they were structural engineers.

'IT WILL BREAK'

Starkey, himself an engineer, said it was a practical job that a contractor or heavy timber carpenter could do. He also referred to a report last April which recommended the premises be demolished.

Ald. William Campbell, a general contractor, said the next move the building makes "it will break. It is simple to fix up with a few tie rods, very inexpensive, so it couldn't collapse. The building is in terrible shape."

But a reading to council of the file on the subject included a comment that the hall is past the stage where remedial work is possible.

Both Curtis and Ald. Edith Gunning urged that "something more" be done than simply table for viewing. Others said this is the necessary legal step before demolition.

Ald. Leslie Passmore said "the fact that it will get this much publicity is a clear indication it will close tomorrow."

COLLEGE'S FIRST BUDGET $100,000 OVER

Council Member Resigns in Protest

Failure to keep Juan de Fuca College's first budget within boundaries promised ratepayers in September has prompted the resignation of a college councilman.

Dr. Victor Rogers, a Greater Victoria school trustee as well as a councilman, quit Monday night because the budget was nearly $100,000 higher than promised taxpayers when they approved the proposal to replace the present Institute of Adult Studies.

Greater Victoria school district ratepayers voted Oct. 10 and were told the cost of operating the college would be about $250,000 or about six-tenths of a mill.

The Oct. 10 vote, however, was a non-money vote.

The budget approved Monday by the council set the local share of running the college at $286,709 for the 12 months from April 1, 1971, to March 31, 1972.

The council also set the fees at $200 annually.

The figure of $250 for fees was discussed by the council but turned down. The increased fee structure would have dropped the local cost figure to $241,559 or under the $250,000 estimate.

But the council was faced with two factors that complicated the budgetary picture.

The first was the $62,403 operating cost of the present Institute of Adult Studies from Jan. 1, 1971, to June 30, 1971, and the second was a recent provincial government switch putting college budgets on a fiscal-year basis rather than a calendar-year basis.

ROGERS

This second point means the council had to write a 15-month budget from Jan. 1, 1971, to March 31, 1972, to cover the operation of the institute and the college.

(If the council had only to budget for 1971 for the operation of both the institute and college cost would have been $242,732 to be paid by local ratepayers. This would be .639 mills or very close to the six-mill figure officials estimated the college would cost earlier in the fall.)

The 15-month budget, however, will cost the taxpayer $349,112 or .9.9 mills.

Rogers said today the council wasn't being honest by allowing the college budget to overrun estimates promised the electorate for the Oct. 10 plebiscite.

He added that if the council had agreed to the student fee of $250 a year instead of the $200 figure agreed to this would have been an attempt to keep the cost within the estimates.

Rogers and fellow councilman Allan McKinnon voted against the budget approval and the $200 fee motions.

Councillors were told they could not act on Rogers' resignation as he had been appointed by the provincial government.

'Hefty Blow' Fractures Man's Skull

A 22-year-old sailor who fractured another man's skull with a drunken punch Oct. 30 was fined $200 today when he pleaded guilty to assault causing bodily harm before Judge William Ostler.

Roderick Cupp, of CFB Esquimalt was entering Tillicum Club premises at 645 Johnson when he got into a scuffle with a man who had been blocking the doorway, court was told.

Both were intoxicated, police said, but when Cupp lashed out with a punch that struck the other man above the temple, the man collapsed unconscious.

Hospital treatment subsequently revealed a depressed skull fracture that required surgery and the insertion of a metal plate.

Ostler asked Cupp if he was a professional prize fighter and when the man said no the judge commented on the punch being "a pretty hefty blow."

The judge said his sentence was lenient because there was no evidence that Cupp intended to seriously harm his opponent.

City Hall Prods Hydro

Victoria city council decided today to prod B.C. Hydro and the Capital Regional District for information and policy on underground power transmission.

The move comes following a letter from the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission which asks what action occurred when the commission asked for a technical study on underground transmission.

Mayor Courtney Haddock told council's B Committee that a year ago a B.C. Hydro official "promised" some action but nothing has been received.

The city will write to both B.C. Hydro and the region for a progress report.

DRIVERS STAY ON OVERTIME

Bus Hours to Remain As Is

Victoria bus drivers will not follow the lead of Vancouver drivers in refusing to work overtime, a B.C. Hydro spokesman said today.

It was reported from Vancouver the overtime cutback will force many residents, particularly University of B.C. students, to seek other means of transportation.

H. R. Halls, Victoria transportation manager, said "voluntary overtime" was involved.

"There's always a certain amount of overtime during the rush hour, and the drivers volunteer to take it," Halls said.

Bus drivers and mechanics, members of the Amalgamated Transit Union, are involved in contract negotiations with Hydro and recently served 72-hour strike notice.

The former contract expired Oct. 31, and under its terms drivers earned $3.75 an hour and mechanics $4.35.

The Victoria local has about 200 members. A spokesman for the union could not be reached today.

Hooson Named Manager

HOOSON
. . . unanimous choice

Assistant city manager William Hooson was named by Victoria city council Monday to succeed Dennis Young as city manager.

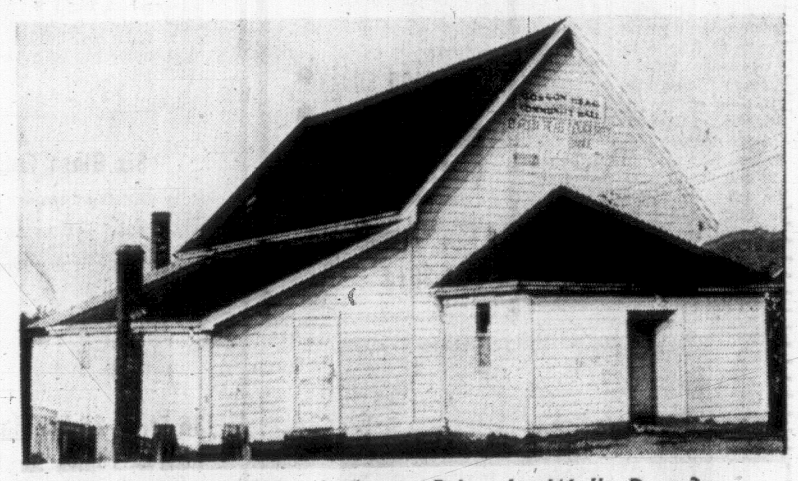
Hooson, 49, was appointed assistant in 1964 and before that was city welfare administrator.

He will begin duties as manager Feb. 1 when Young moves to the Capital Regional District government office as executive director. Young's appointment was made Nov. 27.

Hooson's appointment was made following an in-camera council meeting Monday afternoon. It was announced the vote was unanimous.

Salary is $22,000, rising to $23,000 after one year.

Hooson said following his appointment he is "very pleased that council gave me this vote of confidence."



Will a New Year's Dance Bring Its Walls Down?

Arthur Mayse . . .

JUST OVER A WEEK AGO I told you about 230 elementary-grade children whose school library consisted of books in two distinct categories.

There were the volumes bought from their own salaries by staff members. The others, which is to say about half, were so old and so worn by generations of young readers that they should have been retired long since.

Today, thanks to the generosity of Victorians who feel that children who want to read should be given the chance, the South Park school library situation is changing for the better.

For the past week, I've been sharing my desk space with books, books, books. They arrived in bags and cartons and neatly-corded bundles.

So far, acting for the donors, I've passed close to 200 titles on to South Park. They're being catalogued now, as welcome additions to the library.

And one thing sure: they will not lack eager readers.

But occasionally he runs into something that he doesn't pretend to understand.

More than once he has wondered whether the great carnivores that he photographs at ranges as close as 17 feet are possessed of an extra sense.

As he explained last week when be brought his very fine color film, Grizzly Country, to Victoria, he had no luck in shooting grizzly footage during his first attempts.

He and his two sons toiled long and hard to get the big bears in their lenses. Each time, though, their camera quarry lost no time in removing itself from the scene.

"That year," Andy explained, "we'd taken rifles along as a precaution. All we got on film was a succession of grizzly backsides. When we moved in, the bears moved out."

Furthermore, the grizzlies continued to spook even when the Russells decided to leave their firearms in camp.

Next year they took no rifles, and got any number of bear sequences.

"I can't account for it," Andy said, "but they seemed to know we were harmless."

His question:

Is it possible that some animals are gifted with what man has labelled extra-sensory perception?

Saturday will be municipal elections day, and wherever two or three are gathered together, the candidates for office are making their pitches. Many are veterans of civic administration who know the ropes. They're also aware that a place on council or board can have its little drawbacks.

For the benefit of untried candidates who have yet to test the heat in the municipal kitchen, it wouldn't hurt to list a few of these.

There are the meetings. There are the committee meetings. There is the discovery that much of any municipality's essential business is complex, time-taking, and deadly dull.

There is also the budget, which is unfailingly so large that it provokes squeals of dismay from the taxpayers, and so small that it can't possibly accomplish even half of what needs doing in any year.

The successful candidate needn't expect, either, that the voters who inscribed their Xs after his name have full confidence in his abilities. Let him fail to please, and they will be among his loudest critics. They may even give him a worse time than those who didn't support him.

He can expect to be damned if he does and damned if he doesn't, and let me be the first to wish him luck. As your rep and mine, he's going to need it!

Soviets Hold Defence Spending

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet government announced today a 1971 defence budget of 17,900 million rubles, or $19,800 million at the official rate, the same as the expenditure for 1970.

Finance Minister Vasily Garbuzov told the Supreme Soviet, the parliament of the Soviet Union, that government spending next year would total 160,800 million rubles, an increase of 16,300 million.

The figures announced by Garbuzov showed defence spending in 1971 will consume 11 per cent of the total budget. But the allocation to defence is believed to represent only about half of actual military spending. For one thing, military research and development is lumped into other non-defence items.

Before the budget report, the government's chief industrial planner announced that Soviet industrial production made a comeback in 1970 and increased eight per cent to exceed the central planners' goal by a healthy margin, the Soviet parliament was told.

But Nikolai K. Baibakov, chairman of the economic planning commission, complained that performance could have been better if modern technology had been introduced quicker.

Baibakov told the Supreme Soviet the average worker's wage in 1970 is 126 rubles a month, or $139.86 at the official rate, excluding the numerous welfare benefits. He said it was 121 rubles at the end of 1969.

Baibakov promised a better life for the Soviet people in 1971, setting the consumer goods industry for a planned increase of 7.4 per cent.

Status Proposed For All Cultures

TORONTO (CP) — A new constitution should officially recognize the multi-cultural nature of Canada, the Ukrainian Canadian University Students Union said Monday.

In a brief to the federal committee studying the constitution, the students said Canada is composed of many "etho-cultural groups, none of which forms the majority."

The brief, read by Marusia Kucharyshyn, said constitutional recognition of Canada's cultural pluralism would do away with "the fallacious and discriminatory concepts of two founding races"—English and French.

"The new Canadian constitution must either omit reference to any ethno-cultural groups in Canada, or it must enunciate the equality of all groups, and the equality of cultural and linguistic group rights must be guaranteed in the new constitution."

The Ukrainians also urged that minority languages be given regional status where the population warrants it, and called for government grants to aid the development of all cultural groups.

In a separate brief, the Toronto branch of the Ukrainian Canadian committee said the constitution must embody guarantees for protection of rights of various minorities against discriminaton.

$100,000 Kidnap Plot Foiled by U.S. Police

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — Police announced Monday night they had broken up a $100,000 kidnap attempt on a banker's son which led them on a 26-hour chase from here to Las Vegas and back.

They said the kidnap victim, Lee Spath, 20, was recovered safely and two armed men were arrested after helicopters trailed two cars through Los Angeles suburbs.

The kidnap began late Sunday night when two armed men broke into the luxury home of Spath's father, William, a Bank of America branch manager, and demanded that he accompany them to the bank.

Spath told the men he could not get the key to the safe until morning and the two left the house, taking his son with them.

Spath Monday received telephone instructions to board a bus to Las Vegas and deposit $100,000 in cash in an airport locker there.

The banker followed instructions. When a man called to pick up the package from the locker police followed his car 200 miles back to Los Angeles.

Police in helicopters saw the car with the ransom money make contact with a second car. They then closed in and arrested the drivers of both cars. Young Spath and all the ransom money were recovered in the second car.

Agent Admits Note Change

HAMILTON (CP) — Robert Forsyth, 20, of Vancouver, was acquitted Monday on three charges of trafficking in drugs after a police undercover agent admitted altering his notes during a court recess.

Forsyth, who now operates a leather-goods business in Vancouver was living here during March and April. He was charged with selling drugs on three different occasions to an undercover agent, Hamilton Constable Ross Wood.

Constable Wood's testimony contained discrepancies as to the time of the purchases and the place of the meetings.

After defence lawyer Thomas Beckett accused him of comparing notes with other witnesses, the constable admitted in court he had altered dates on his notes during a 10-minute recess.

In dismissing the charges, Judge Robert Morrison said he did not blame the undercover agent, but his superiors.

GOODYEAR

GRAND PRIX RETREADS

Goodyear Grand Prix retreads may be the answer to your winter driving problems, particularly if you own an older car. Can you rely on retreads? You can if they are Goodyear. Bus companies, trucking firms, even airlines use Goodyear factory-built retreads because Goodyear carefully selects each casing before highly trained factory personnel apply the same rubber which is used in new tires. You get a tire that is just like new for a really low price and they are guaranteed too. Traction? The new Grand Prix design wraps around the casing to give a wider tread than older style recaps and more rubber on the road means more traction when the going gets rough. Retreads are available in blackwall and whitewall in all popular sizes.

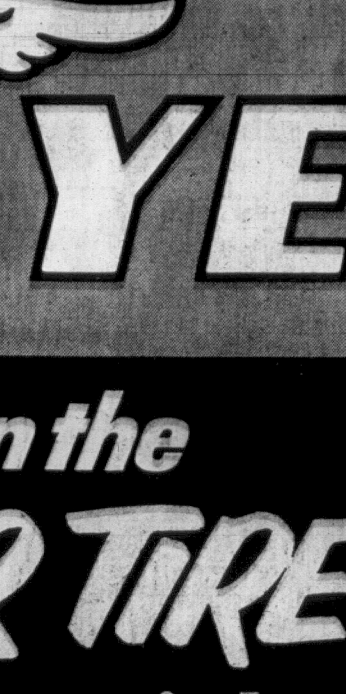
LOW PRICES ON OTHER SIZES, TOO!



SURE GRIP IV

We believe the Sure Grip IV is the best tire in its price range. Four full plies of "stronger than steel" nylon give the best protection against winter road hazards at this price. This tire has also the tread design formerly only available on our higher-priced tires. Its rugged deep tread is the one that made the name Suburbanite synonymous with winter traction. For the first time this year, Sure Grip IV is also available in whitewalls and in sizes to fit most domestic models as well as many "imports". No wonder it's the best winter tire in its price class.

SUBURBANITE VYTACORD

Moderately priced for the motorist who wants a tire that runs quieter, lasts longer. Four plies of polyester cord have all the soft-riding and strength characteristics of nylon, but in addition, they overcome the flat spotting or morning thump problems associated with nylon. The interlocking "S" tread design provides all the "get up and go" traction associated with Suburbanite, but goes further. This is the tire that is all bite and no bark. We think it is the quietest winter tire ever built. Polyester cord, interlocking "S" tread plus a special rubber compound combine to give more traction, more service, than our economy tire. Available in whitewalls and blackwalls in most popular sizes.

SUBURBANITE POLYGLAS

If you own a new car, Polyglas tires are a must for you. They team up with the "extra mileage" Polyglas tires on your front wheels to give safety and traction that lasts and lasts. Polyglas winter tires have the special rubber compound which contributes to greater traction and tread life but its the "belted construction" of Polyglas tires that really make the difference. Two fiberglas belts keep the quiet interlocking "S" tread firmly on the road reducing squirm which eats away tread. This means more traction longer. Polyglas is built to keep its grip longer than non-belted tires. Available in sizes to fit all standard and high-performance cars. Whitewalls, of course, Polyglas has lots of imitators but if it doesn't say Goodyear, it can't be Polyglas.

WHY YOU SHOULD BUY GOODYEAR TIRES

The market has been flooded with tires at "bargain" prices. Are these tires really bargains? Hard to tell—particularly for the average tire buyer. Terms such as "premium" and "first line" are meaningless. One manufacturer's premium quality tire can be the economy grade of another. Tires can be made to sell at a price. The lower the price, the lower the quality. Cheaper tires are less durable and have less tread and tread depth. You get what you pay for.

Your protection: the company that stands behind the product. Consider Goodyear. Goodyear builds a tire to meet the driving needs of every Canadian motorist whether you need traction or traction plus other features—if it carries the Goodyear name you can be sure it's top value for your tire dollar. Goodyear's reputation has been built by leading the tire industry... bringing new and better products—like Suburbanite and Polyglas—to the motoring public. That's why you can depend on the Goodyear lifetime guarantee. It's honoured by Goodyear dealers everywhere.

GOODYEAR

NO LIMIT LIFETIME GUARANTEE

All new Goodyear auto tires are guaranteed against defects in workmanship and materials and normal road hazards, except repairable punctures.

If a Goodyear tire fails under this guarantee any of more than 80,000 Goodyear dealers in Canada and the United States will make allowance on a new tire based on original tread depth remaining and current "Goodyear Price."

SPEED DONATO'S GAME BUT BUCHANAN FASTER

NEW YORK (CP) — Donato Paduano, Canadian welterweight champion from Montreal, was given some of his own medicine Monday night and went down to his first defeat in 23 fights, losing a unanimous 10-round decision to lightweight champion Ken Buchanan of Scotland in a non-title fight at Madison Square Garden.

"I've never met anyone as fast as him," Paduano said after the fight. Some of Paduano's victims said the same thing after meeting the 21-year-old Italian-Canadian who won his first 22 flights as a professional with his lightning hands and constant attack.

Buchanan showed even more speed than Paduano, the world's No. 3 ranked welterweight, and also eluded the fast Montrealer with lightning footwork and amazing bobbing and weaving on his way to a lopsised decision. Referee Zack Clayton scored the fight eight rounds for Buchanan, one round for Paduano and one even. Judge Joe Eppy had it 6-3-1 and judge Jack Gordon scored it 8-2.

BILL WALKER

This is the story of one man's effort to straighten out Toronto, if not Canadian Press, or never underestimate the power of a publicity chief. Some may even call it operation SNAFU.

It began last week with the announcement out of Toronto that the first triple dead heat had been recorded in Canadian thoroughbred racing. It got big play everywhere, especially in Toronto, where they didn't know any better, and even had a mention here.

But when it was recorded in the Times, a bleat immediately went up from this corner which translated meant: "It ain't so!" Victoria had the first triple dead heat, and it was for first, not second, as was the claim in Toronto.

Of course, Toronto can be forgiven. They seldom get anything first, and just grab on to anything that looks like it might give them a first. They can recant later, which is the case again.

Even out here, the editor put up a fight. "When?" he screamed. Dead silence greeted his remark, but just for a moment. "I'll find out for you," was the plantive reply. By this time, however, the issue had gone to press, and the fact recorded for posterity.

Some hours later, after due discussions with interested parties, one Harry Filion, the publicity director of the B.C. Jockey Club, included, the true facts became known, and a study was launched into the case of the first triple dead heat.

This, of course, was recorded in Victoria, at the old Willows Park in Oak Bay. The date was Sept. 21, 1940, a Saturday afternoon with a banner crowd in the stands.

And it didn't take long for the first excitement of the day to be generated, either. For in the very first race, three mares hit the wire as one, and the track cameraman saw it the same way too. It was three tied for first. My Debut paid $23.70, $17.55 and $150.90; Margery Daw $5.20, $4.85 and $4.60; Saucy Maid $10.30, $12.30 and $10.80. The distance was six furlongs and 30 yards. The time 1:17 and the jockeys involved were Bobby Warren on My Debut, Emil Sporri on Margery Daw and Alec Haller on Saucy Maid.

"Aha," thought your agent. "This will show up those fellows in Toronto, at Greenwood Park, and at Canadian Press. And won't the editor be pleased too."

But alas, a local claim to fame was not to be. Filion had a better idea. He had gotten on the blower in Vancouver, at the weekend, and told all his friends what a dastardly deed had been committed in Toronto, and he, Filion, wanted it changed, for the record.

Which means, in the trade, that your dutiful racing secretary had gone to bed with his own story and awoke to find it splashed across the pages of every paper in the country. Filion had done his job well, the cad.

But at least he put the record straight, even if all he had been asked to do was to verify a fact that had been lying dormant for lo, these 30 years.

And so Victoria has been avenged, and if Toronto wants to get huffy again about second-place finishers being involved in a triple dead-heat, even the second time in Canadian history, let them all be warned. Because there was also a triple dead-heat in B.C., for show, I do believe. But I'm not telling when, until I check it out MYSELF.

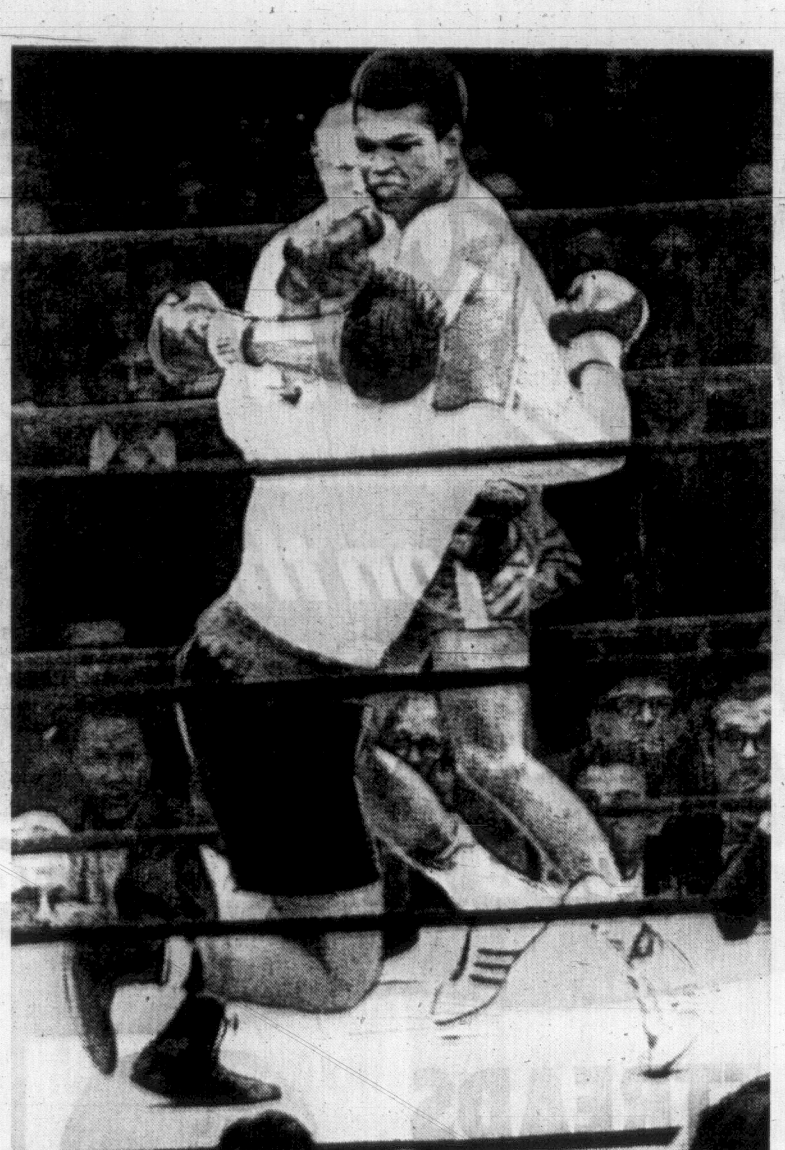
Meanwhile, what were you all doing in 1940, in September? Well, Lynn Patrick was pulling up stakes and heading for the New York Rangers training camp in Winnipeg . . . George "Porky" Andrews was off to the University of Oregon and his U.S. Collegiate basketball career. James Bay was winning the city senior lacrosse championship over the Jokers. Gus Munro was the coach of the latter, and Andy Ovcharick was described as a "tricky and hard-working forward" . . . Bob Feller had just won his 27th game of the American League baseball season . . . W. Court had won a medal golf round with a score of 76-11—65; Vic Painter had shot a 71-4—67 in the same competition, and the Dominoes basketball team was about to be reinstated by the Canadian Amateur Basketball Association.

But dammit all, Harry!



DOWN GOES OSCAR

Bonavena Says He'll Bet on Ali

Knockout in 15th Sets Ring Stage For Richest Bout

NEW YORK (CP)—Muhammad Ali proved several things when he scored a 15th-round technical knockout over Oscar Bonavena in Madison Square Garden Monday night.

He proved he could come back after being in dire straits; he proved he had the stamina, after his 3½-year absence from the ring, to go the distance, and he proved to the dismay of his partisan supporters that his face could be marked. But did he prove he is ready for Joe Frazier, the recognized world heavyweight champion?

Bonavena said he will bet all his money on Ali and Frazier had better watch out; Ali said he can't wait, and Frazier said: "I'll be ready for him so he had better put on his dancing shoes."

FINGERS CROSSED

So, if all goes well, the scene is set for the most lucrative boxing extravaganza in history —a $10 million-plus promotion. The Garden, and a few other promoters, have their fingers crossed that they may be the successful bidder.

Ali was slightly marked under the right eye after the fight, the first time he had been marked during his career. He now is 31-0. Bonavena, who suffered his first knockout in his career, is 47-7-1. Ali weighed 212 and Bonavena 204.

"I did have trouble in the late rounds," Ali said. "I was tired, but it was my skill, timing and stamina that pulled me through.

"I needed the work. It was the type of fight to see if I could go the distance, to see if I could take a punch and give one."

RIGHT ON TARGET

At Monticello, N.Y., Frazier said Ali was "right on target" with the left hook that started him on the way to his knockout over Bonavena in the 15th round.

Clay connected with a couple of one-two combinations in the second round, but Bonavena kept bulling his way in and was connecting with wild left hooks near the end of the round.

The third round had the Marquis of Queensberry turning in his grave.

PILING UP POINTS

Ali heaved Bonavena through the ropes twice and taunted him throughout the round. But the Argentine kept up his bull-like charges and was doing his own little dirty-work in the clinches. But Ali was piling up the points despite the infractions on both sides.

Then, starting in the fourth, the Argentine started finding the range. Bonavena nailed Ali with a wild left hook and after a little rough-housing on the side, had Ali hanging on at the bell.

The trend continued until the ninth—the round that Ali had predicted he would knock out Bonavena—and then the packed house in the Garden was treated to the wildest three minutes of boxing seen in many a day.

HAD ALI IN TROUBLE

Ali staggered Bonavena with a savage left hook and it looked as though the Argentine was on his way down. But when Ali appeared to move in for the finisher, he was nailed with a Bonavena right hand that had him in trouble.

The two battlers exchanged blows for a two-minute period with both being staggered several times and the packed house going wild. The final punch of the round was a solid left hook by Bonavena that caught Ali coming in.

TOWEL TOSSED

Bonavena came charging out for the final round. Then out of nowhere, Ali exploded a left hook on the Argentine's jaw and he dropped like a fallen tree. He took the mandatory eight count and a left-right Ali combination laid him flat on his back again. Ali knocked him down again to automatically end the fight under the three-knockdown rule, just as Bonavena's corner was throwing the towel in, signalling defeat.

Ali's second fight in six weeks and his first in New York since he defended his heavyweight title as Cassius Clay, March 22, 1967, drew a crowd of 19,417, which paid a gross of $615,401.

With all of the receipts, counting closed-circuit television, Ali's 42½ per cent could come to about $750,000, and Bonavena's share upwards of $400,000 on his 22½ per cent.

MUCHO HOMBRE, RATING BY RINGO

NEW YORK (AP) — "Three weeks rest, three weeks training, six weeks and I'll be ready for Frazier."

Ali was thinking ahead as he lay on the table in his dressing room, exhausted, and being questioned by reporters after his stunning 15th-round knockout over Oscar (Ringo) Bonavena Monday night at Madison Square Garden.

"Frazier is not nearly as strong as Bonavena. He's easy to hit. He keeps coming in with his head out and you can hit him with jabs. You don't have to move as much for Frazier."

Bonavena, the Argentina heavyweight champion who had never been knocked out until Ali dropped him three times in the 15th, was a good comparison because he had twice given Frazier all he could handle before losing two decisions.

He, too, felt Ali would have an easier time with Frazier than with himself.

"This is the champion," he said minutes earlier when the two met the press in a show of friendship that ignored the name-calling of the pre-fight publicity buildup. "This man is much hombre, mucho hombre."

"He hit me more than anyone I've ever fought" said Ali. "He looked awkward, muscle-bound and slow, but he has a good sense of reach and he's awfully fast. He really surprised me. He's a better fighter than I thought."

Then he chided reporters, many of whom had wondered in print if Ali did indeed still have the punch to handle Frazier.

"It defies statistics, my going 15 rounds with a man who has never been down, who is a bull. Of all people, the man who stopped him didn't have a punch."

No Trouble With Seven, Cougars Bid for Eight

Seven has been a good number for Victoria Cougars, and New Westminster Royals will be out to end it at that when the British Columbia Junior Hockey League teams square off tonight in Memorial Arena.

Game time is 8 p.m.

Cougars launched a seven-game winning streak early in October before Kamloops Rockets broke it with a 4-3 victory in Memorial Arena. New Westminster tacked on another loss in a following game, then Cougars took off on another unbeaten run.

Heading into tonight's game, the Cats have won five and tied two of their last seven games.

ROYALS TRIPPED

Despite their imposing record of late, Cougars haven't been able to pull too far ahead of second-place Vancouver Centennials. The Cents nudged to within three points of Victoria by defeating the Royals 6-3 Monday night in Vancouver.

Alex Dick punched in two goals within 59 seconds early in the third period to spark the Vancouver triumph. Rookie Bob Lewis, Neil Murphy (with his 22nd of the season), Bob Gaston and Jim Chapman counted Centennials' other goals while John Dalzell, John McCracken and Kevin Coats connected for Royals.

Centre Jim Lautenslager will return to the Victoria lineup tonight but winger Mark Thomas is a doubtful starter. Lautenslager missed three games because of a pulled neck muscle.

Thomas had a tooth extracted Monday and coach Ron Maxwell will know later today if the rookie winger will be available.

HOCKEY SCENE AGAIN SERENE

All is harmony and sweetness between the British Columbia Amateur Hockey Association and the B.C. Junior Hockey League once more.

Threats of the junior circuit's suspension by the provincial body were abandoned following weekend meetings by both groups.

The junior league was ordered to pay a two per cent assessment which teams have been withholding from the BCAHA pending payment of CAHA development money.

Victoria Cougar manager Eric Bishop said the assessment fees were paid to the BCAHA and the provincial body, in turn, is working to secure the development money on behalf of the clubs.

The BCJHL also decided at its Sunday meeting in Vancouver to participate in interprovincial playoffs. The BCAHA has asked the league to have a winner ready by April 3 to play the Alberta Junior League champions in the first round of interprovincial playoffs.

Bishop also said Victoria referee Dave (Bunker) Hill will be asked to officiate BCJHL games again. Hill had been a Victoria regular until October when the league, apparently accepting objections by Vancouver Centennials, refused to assign Hill to officiate in Victoria games.

Unbeaten Douglas Wins Six Straight

Hotel Douglas led all the way Monday to take their sixth straight victory in the Victoria Senior Men's Basketball League, tripping Robertson's Men's Wear 85-66 at Central Junior High School.

Every Hotel Douglas player got into the scoring act with at least two points and four hit for double figures.

RAINBOW WINNER

Vikings Down Golden Bears

University of Victoria Vikings exploded in the second half Monday to tuck away a 75-59 victory over University of Alberta Golden Bears and grab a third-place share in the Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association basketball league.

Vikings are now tied for their spot with University of Winnipeg but the Wesmen hold a game in hand.

Playing what was perhaps their best game this season, Vikings roared away from a 34-34 deadlock at halftime and controlled much of the action on the boards against the taller Golden Bears.

Balance also provided one of the keys to victory as all Uvic players hit the scoreboard for the second straight game.

HOLMES SETS PACE

Tom Holmes led Vikings by scoring 19 points and hauling in 31 rebounds, including 20 off the defensive boards.

Uvic captain Skip Cronck chipped in 15 points, two more than Stan Piper, who also played a strong game on the boards by grabbing 15 rebounds in all.

Vikings were still without the services of promising rookie Tim Reiger, who injured an ankle in the game against University of Calgary Dinosaurs.

Larry Nowak was the only Golden Bear to hit in the double figures with 21 points and provided the backbone in the Alberta defence by capturing 20 rebounds.

In other games Monday, University of British Columbia Thunderbirds downed visiting Dinosaurs 88-47 to chalk up a seventh straight victory and University of Manitoba Bisons extended a winning streak to six games be defeating University of Brandon Bobcats 116-68 in Winnipeg.

The league now takes a break until Jan. 8 when all 10 teams swing back into action. Vikings will play host to Bisons on that night.

Oriole Pitchers Gain Most Honors

BOSTON (AP) — Baltimore's world-champion Orioles gained most of the American League's 1970 pitching honors, official records released today by the league office show.

The Baltimore staff led the league in earned-run average for the second-straight year although its 3.15 mark was not as good as the 1969 figure of 2.83.

Individually, the Orioles' big three of Mike Cuellar (24-8), Dave McNally (24-9) and Jim Palmer (20-10) became the first trio of 20-game winners on one club since 1956 and also led in various other departments.

Cuellar led in complete games with 21 and winning percentage at .750. Palmer pitched five shutouts to share top honors with Chuck Dobson of Oakland Athletics and tied with Sam McDowell of Cleveland Indians for most innings pitched at 305.

Cuellar, McNally and Minnesota's Jim Perry (24-12) shared the lead in games won.

McDowell led the league in strikeouts for the third consecutive season and the fifth time in the last six years. The fireballing left-hander fanned 304 batters, lifting his career total to 1,967.

Individual earned-run average honors among pitchers who hurled 162 or more innings went to Oakland's Diego Segui.

One for Hawley

MIAMI (CP) — Sandy Hawley, 21-year-old jockey from Whitby, Ont., trying to break Bill Shoemaker's world record of 485 wins in a season, picked up one victory Monday at Tropical Park. Hawley, who had 451 victories to his credit when he arrived here from Greenwood Track in Toronto, won aboard Sneak Up.

CHARGES CHARGERS . . . . . . WITH BREACH OF CONTRACT

Alworth Sues for $5.6 Million

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Receiver Lance Alworth Monday filed a $5.6 million suit against San Diego Chargers of the National Football League, charging breach of contract, violation of state antitrust laws and other allegations.

In his Superior Court suit, Alworth asked that his contract with the NFL team be declared void and that he be made a free agent to negotiate with the team of his choice.

Alworth, in his final year of a three-year contract with an optional year still to go, contends he signed a contract for $35,000 a year in 1967 for three years with a verbal understanding with Chargers' president Eugene Klein that the club would provide 100 per cent financial support by way of mortgage, financing and capital to build a $1.5-million apartment project in Arkansas.

The 30-year-old Alworth, who missed most of the pre-season because of a contract dispute, followed up his Superior Court action with a federal court suit against the Chargers, the NFL, commissioner Pete Rozelle and all NFL teams, charging violations of the federal antitrust laws.

The federal court suit contends that prior to 1967, when the AFL and NFL announced the merger, there was competition between the two leagues to sign players, some of whom received bonuses of $500,000 and an annual contract salary of $75,000.

The federal suit listed no figures regarding damages, indicating the amount should be determined on the basis of what Alworth might have earned in a free and open market.

Hamilton Voters Carry Park Issue

HAMILTON (CP) — Voters gave the go-ahead to a $1,500,000 expansion of Civic Stadium, home of the Tiger-Cats of the Eastern Football Conference, by a 48,006-to-28,580 vote Monday night.

A last-minute promise by Hamilton's Junior Chamber of Commerce that it would raise $500,000 to install artificial turf if the voters approved the expansion apparently tipped the scales in favor of rebuilding the field's 44-year-old north stands.

At the moment Civic Stadium has fewer than 12,000 top-priced seats between the goal lines, the smallest number of any Canadian Football League city. Expansion would increase the between-the-goal-line seating to 20,000 and raise total capacity to 34,800 from 29,000.

The issue split the city into two camps. The faction favoring expansion coined the phrase Keep Football in Hamilton, and Tiger-Cats general manager Ralph Sazio warned: "If we don't get the seats, I say we will not last more than four or five years.

"That doesn't mean we will leave Hamilton. That means we will die on the vine."

Other football coaches and players, including Coach Leo Cahill of Toronto Argonauts and Mike Wadsworth, president of the CFL Players' Association, spoke at rallies in the city, urging support for expansion.

Mindy Sets Pace In Yarrows Win

Mindy Bawlf scored 13 points Monday to lead Yarrows to 32-13 victory over Metropolitan in a bantam girls' game of the Victoria and District Amateur Basketball Association at Mount View High School.

Browns Regain Share of Lead

He referred to their 21-10 victory over Houston Oilers Monday night which boosted the Browns back into a tie for the lead in the American Football Cnference's Central Division.

A standing-room-only Astrodome crowd of 50,582 at the game saw the Oilers mathematically eliminated from the Central Division title chase. The Oilers now are 3-8-1 for the year and 2½ games behind Cleveland and Cincinnati Bengals, who are tied for the top at 6-6. Each club has two games remaining.

The Browns spotted the Oilers a 3-0 first-quarter lead and then came back to take a 21-3 lead before Houston managed to score its only touchdown with less than two minutes remaining.

BALANCED ATTACK

Cleveland used the timely passing of Bill Nelsen and the slashing runs of Leroy Kelly to wear down the Oilers. The Browns also employed a stubborn defence when they needed it.

Nelsen completed 15 of 27 passes for 161 yards and one touchdown. His touchdown was a one-yarder to Gary Collins.

Kelly, one of the National Football League's all-time rushing greats, carried 20 times for 108 yards and scored on a one-yard sweep around right end. Bo Scott, former Canadian Football League player with Ottawa Rough Riders, added the other Cleveland touchdown on a two-yard run.

Champ Knocked Out

Hoop Game Delayed

Four Jam First In Girls' League

Victoria and Mount View created a log jam in first place of the Inter-High School Girls' Basketball League with home-court victories on Monday.

Victoria picked up its second straight win by downing Oak Bay 31-26 and Mount View won its second game in three starts by tumbling Mount Douglas, 53-30.

ESQUIMALT WINS

In another tussle, Esquimalt sank a basket in the dying seconds of the game to edge visiting St. Ann's Academy, 43-41.

Anna Maria Brown sank 17 points to lead Mount View while clubmates Kathy Lovelace and Diana Groves each fired 16. Mount Douglas was led by the 12-point scoring of Colleen Griffin.

Delma Corby set the pace for Esquimalt, which outscored St. Ann's 20-9 in the final quarter, with 12 points. Chrystal Aylesworth chipped in nine points and Chris Wilkinson added eight.

Centennial Baseball Fund

Members of the Victoria Centennials team and officials of the Victoria and District Baseball Association wish to express thanks and appreciation to all those who contributed so generously to the fund that enabled the Centennials to attend the world amateur baseball tournament in Cartagena, Colombia.

Contributions to the fund reached a total of $3,143.62, close to the amount required by the Centennials for their share of expenses. This total includes amounts received after the official fund drive ended from donors who did not receive credit for their assistance in stories printed by the Colonist and Times during the campaign.

We, the VDBA and players, feel greatly indebted to the sports staffs of both papers and to radio stations for enthusiastic support in the drive for funds.

Thank you, everybody,
Gar Taylor,
President, VBDA.

Minor Baseball Loops Aim at Canadian Image

Connie Mack baseball may have gone by the boards in favor of a more distinctive Canadian program.

A weekend meeting in Vancouver of all former Connie Mack leagues throughout the province approved the move "toward total Canadian participation" and a change of name to the "British Columbia Juvenile Baseball Association."

Bill Daniels of Victoria was named president of the division, which will operate under the wing of the B.C. and Canadian Federation of Amateur Baseball.

"We were reluctant to change," said Daniels, "Because many of us were diehard Connie Mack supporters. by the same token, however, there was no justice in continuing with a United States-oriented program because of the expenses involved."

BISONS AND BEAVERS

The league for under-18 players is expected to work towards a Canadian final eventually, but the Western Canada championships "will be the end of the playoff line" in 1971, he added.

B.C.'s Connie Mack program contributed 52 players to U.S. colleges in the Pacific Northwest through scholarships, said Daniels, and he expects the new program to be better.

In Winnipeg, an official of the CFAB said the 18-year-old division will be categorized "Bison." Ron Hayter of Edmonton, CFAB vice-president, also said "beaver" will be the name adopted for a division covering 11-13 year-olds and "Mosquito" will designate the 9-11 category.

CANADIAN RULEBOOK

Hayter also said a distinctively Canadian rulebook has been approved and will be ready for national distribution in April.

He said the new rules will bring uniformity to Canadian baseball. "It is one of the most significant steps for amateur baseball in Canada."

The sport's development has been hampered by rules "and a hodge-podge of confusing regulations."

It is not known what effect the new rules will have on Pony and Baby Ruth Leagues. The associations are governed by the B.C. Minor Baseball Association.

OUT OF ACTION for about one month will be Roy Edwards, No. 1 goalie for Detroit Red Wings. Edwards, 33, suffered hairline skull fracture Sunday when he hit ice while making save in National Hockey League game, won 4-2 by St. Louis Blues.

Dentures Over 2 Years Old?

Dentures—especially older dentures—are harder to keep clean than natural teeth. And hard brushing with abrasive pastes or powders may damage or scratch.

That's why so many dentists now recommend soaking your dentures clean in easy-to-use KLEENITE.

KLEENITE has a 3-way formula—(1) detergent; (2) activated oxygen; (3) solvent—that surges to tiny crevices; penetrates where no brush can reach; helps soak away film and stain. The dingier the dentures, the more spectacular the results . . . with KLEENITE Denture Cleanser!

Why Vote?

Anthony Miller would be a good alderman. What made him run for office?

At a recent public hearing on a rezoning of a waterfront property in the City of Victoria, from single family residential to an apartment-office-restaurant complex, the mayor terminated the hearing by refusing to hear any further speakers. Judgement was made in favour of the developer. Those opposed: The residents of the entire neighbourhood. Those in favour: The developer, the mayor and a majority of the City Council.

Although the council do not deny this abuse of the law, their attitude is you spend your money taking us to court then we'll spend your money fighting you . . . complaint received and filed.

That same day, the residents of the area around Spencer Castle found that the mayor attempted to cut short their debate. As they had retained a solicitor, the end result was successful to the property owners.

There is no time limit between application for rezoning of any property, thus the City Council will simply hammer rezonings at these people until they crumble . . .

It's Here! Now read George Orwell's 1984 — If you like it, DON'T VOTE — sit back and wait.

Look at the back cover of your new telephone book.

If you would like this for Victoria, DON'T VOTE — it will come.

If you support municipal borrowing at present astronomical interest rates, DON'T VOTE . . . let our taxes rise.

If you don't care about older folks struggling on fixed incomes trying to live respectably — DON'T VOTE — they're strangers anyway.

If you like schemes to turn Victoria into a Los Angeles traffic spree — Stay home on December 12: It is being arranged.

If you feel that older areas of the city should be encouraged to spruce up with municipal help, I'm glad.

I vote because I care. I like Victoria. I like the sea and the breezes. I like sunshine, trees, and birds singing.

I need the help of people who care about more than their own selfish problems.

Victoria can be destroyed. Please don't help kill it . . .

Please come and vote: it's free . . . On Saturday . . . Miller would be very grateful.

Merry Christmas.

Inserted by Anthony Miller for Alderman.

AROUND OUR SHORES — By PAT DUFOUR

Hooks Drop as Winds Fail

Humphrey Golby, one of Oak Bay's aldermanic candidates, took time off from electioneering Saturday to sail three frostbite races at Cadboro Bay and win himself top honors in Davidson dinghy competition.

Finishing second and third in the 13-boat fleet were Ted Bowers and Doug Kidd.

There were also 13 El Toros out for the Royal Vic. racing. Jim Williams was the big winner. Behind him came Marion Brown and John Hall.

Bruce Smith and Doug Taylor Lee tied for first place in Fireball competition, Bill Van Cuylenborg won in X class and Andrew Burton was the top Sabot sailor.

Royal Vic. keel boat skippers were forced to call it a day Sunday when lack of wind to fight a strong ebb tide stalled their boats in a 10-mile race off Sidney.

It wasn't exactly a lost cause. Several of the boats, waiting for the wind that never came, dropped the hook off Sidney Spit and, in spite of the rain, indulged in off-season picnics!

The situation was in reverse Saturday when several boats that compete in the Canoe Bay Siling Club's races off Sidney, expecting winds to build up to gale force, decided to stay dockside.

The 10 boats that remained competed in sou-westerlies that ranged between 12 and 15 knots with Bent Jespersen's Limfjord becoming the winner.

Commission 'Farce'

WINNIPEG (CP) — Mayor Stephen Juba of Winnipeg has called the local government boundaries commission "a farce," claiming the commission incorrectly calculated the cost of total amalgamation of Greater Winnipeg's 12 municipalities.

Juba said on a local radio program the commission is trying to adopt the old philosophy 'if you can't convince, confuse'."

The Winnipeg mayor was the only one of the 16 commission members who did not sign the report, made public Monday, although four others registered dissenting opinions.

Boycott Urged

WINNIPEG (CP) — The National Farmers' Union has been urged to boycott all farm equipment manufactured by Dow Chemical Co. Aubrey E. Golden, legal counsel for the union, told the first annual NFU convention Monday that Dow Chemical is indirectly responsible for putting California farm leader Cesar Chavez in jail. Chavez must remain in jail until he calls off a United States-wide lettuce boycott aimed at Bud Antle Inc., owned in part by Dow.

Quotas Increased

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian Wheat Board today announced increased delivery quotas for wheat, barley and rapeseed.

The general quota on wheat is increased to three bushels from two in 15 additional shipping blocks, a general increase to 15 bushels per quota acre from 10 is effective in barley at all shipping blocks, and the rapeseed advance quota for delivery to processing mills has been increased three bushels to 15 per quota acre.

Complex Idea Dies

CALGARY (CP) — A $27 million complex for downtown Calgary apparently died on the drawing boards after a city council meeting Monday night.

Council was told the developer wanted out and was willing to sell the land back to the city.

The complex was to consist of a bus terminal, 20-storey office building, 336-room hotel, an apartment building in excess of 300 suites, parking for more than 600 cars and a second-floor shopping mall.

De Luxe Gift

EDMONTON (CP) — A $2 birthday gift has turned into a new $24,000 Maserati for Terry Chevalier, a University of Alberta commerce student. He won the luxury Italian sports coupe Saturday in a raffle sponsored by the Edmonton Symphony Society after a friend bought him the ticket as a belated birthday gift.

Earlier Date Asked

EDMONTON (CP) — The government of Alberta wants the date of implementation of increased Canada Pension Plan benefits accelerated. The federal white paper on income security calls for increased pension benefits, but says they cannot be made before Jan. 1, 1973. Ray Speaker, Alberta social development minister, said health and welfare minister John Munro indicated during the weekend earlier dates would be possible if there was a consensus among the provinces.

Street Honors Historian

Oak Bay's official historian and former reeve, George Murdoch, was honored by Oak Bay council Monday when it named a new street after him.

The crescent, a continuation of Henderson, will now be known as Murdoch Crescent.

Murdoch served as reeve from 1958 to the end of 1963 and was an alderman for 13 years before that time.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

B.C. skies were generally clear this morning as a Pacific ridge of high pressure continued to build along the coast. Temperatures dipped to around 32 in south coastal areas and to the zero to 10-above range in the central Interior.

The Pacific ridge of high pressure over the B.C. coast will drift inland tonight and the next Pacific disturbance will reach the Charlottes Wednesday morning. Rain and strong southeast winds will precede this system in north coastal districts Wednesday.

Rain from this storm will reach the southern mainland Wednesday evening. The southern interior and the Cariboo will be generally sunny Wednesday but snow flurries will persist in most the central Interior in the colder Arctic air.

RAILWAY TIEUP ALMOST CERTAIN THURSDAY

'We Must Strike,' Says Union Head

WASHINGTON (AP) — A country-wide railway strike Thursday appeared inevitable after negotiations collapsed early today. A union leader said the walkout will be called even if Congress grants President Nixon's request for a 45-day delay.

"We must strike," said President C. L. Dennis of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, largest of four AFL-CIO unions representing nearly 500,000 workers in the wage dispute.

Dennis said his union is ready to risk jail terms, fines and public pressure to win its demands.

Denni spoke after a late-night bargaining session called by the labor department failed to produce an agreement or a voluntary postponement.

Nixon, in asking Congress to order a postponement, said a strike would impose a hardship on the American people.

He said if Congress orders an extension of bargaining time and no settlement is reached by Jan. 23, he will make new recommendations to Congress.

Dennis said the union members had waited more than a year since their last pay raise and had no patience for further delay. The dispute has dragged out nearly a year under delaying provisions of the law and Dennis said any further federal intervention would be "like changing the rules of a football game when one side is close to the goal."

Assistant Labor Secretary W. J. Usery said no further talks have been scheduled and the next move is up to Congress.

The four unions rejected the biggest wage offer in rail history, some 37 per cent, or $1.37 an hour over three years for workers now averaging from $3.45 to $3.60. They said work-rule changes demanded by the railways in exchange for the wage offer would eliminate thousands of jobs and sharply increase the workload of remaining employees.

Belgium Wants Both Chinas in UN

By JOHN BEST

BRUSSELS (CP) — Communist China's early admission to the United Nations on its own terms is regarded here as much less of a certainty than in some capitals.

Belgian officials anticipate continuing difficulty for the Peking regime if it persists in its policy of accepting membership only at the expense of Nationalist China's ouster from the world organization despite the big boost Peking recently got from Canada.

Belgium has interested itself for years in the task of helping mainland China out of its isolation and into the mainstream of international affairs.

But it has approached the problem differently from Canada. Instead of establishing bilateral diplomatic relations first and then proceeding to support Peking's entry into the UN, as Canada had, Belgium is concentrating on finding a formula for accommodating both the Communists and the Nationalists in the world body.

GIVEN UP BY CANADA

Canada abandoned a similar search years ago, regarding it as futile in face of the insistence by each contending faction that it is the sole legitimate representative of the Chinese people.

Belgium conspicuously failed to change its position to one of unconditional support of Peking, as a number of states changed theirs, after Canada recognized the Communist government and threw its weight behind Peking's case for admittance to the UN.

Mitchell Sharp, External Affairs Minister, has publicly predicted that with the new line-up of forces Peking could be admitted to the UN in 1972 or even 1971.

He has put the U.S. on notice that it cannot count on Canada's vote at next year's General Assembly meeting for the perennial "important question" resolution. Under this device, supported by Canada until now, the Albanian resolution calling for a straight credentials transfer from the Nationalists to the Communists requires a two-thirds majority for passage.

RECEIVED MAJORITY

In the assembly last month, Peking received a simple majority for the first time but fell far short of a two-thirds majority.

The count was 51 to 48 with 25 abstentions.

Belgium has on the shelf, ready for possible re-presentation as an alternative to the Albanian resolution, one which they put forward some years ago but which was soundly defeated.

Under it, Peking would occupy the China seat in both General Assembly and the Security Council, but the Nationalists would remain in the UN as representatives of the people of Taiwan.

A Belgian spokesman said the resolution might well draw enough support away from the Albanian measure to save the Nationalists from expulsion.

Aspidistra Comeback

By HILDA BEASTALL

A house plant once described as "the most popular of all for dwelling room decoration" went out of fashion for 30 or 40 years but could, with a bit of publicity, be brought back.

The aspidistra, known as parlor-palm, cast-iron-plant and other names in the early years of this century, still maintains its ability to withstand heat, dust, poor soil, drought and dim light.

Hilda

Once in a long while we find one of these house plants growing with stiff, glossy evergreen leaves and a general air of health, and we know it is really showing appreciation of better conditions. A variegated form with longitudinally striped leaves is occasionally seen, and the green and cream coloring is liked by some.

Today in dry-air centrally heated homes, the aspidistra makes a fine decoration. It needs space; and a broad picture window facing north is just the place for a large specimen to be seen in its full beauty of elegant line.

Aspidistra lurida (the only species known) belongs in the natural order of Liliaceae, as does the yucca, another unlikely member of the family.

The name, adapted from the Greek aspidiseon means "little round shield," in reference to the strange purple-brown flowers appearing at soil level in May on plants well established in their pots.

Aspidistras come to us from China, but while this accounts for their general hardiness, it does not account for the flowers being borne at ground level. It is said that they are pollinated by snails. Snails are close relatives of slugs — crawlers — but with shells on their backs as protection from larger crawling animals found in damp, swampy forests.

Along the banks of Florida streams and on edges of southern swampy forest lakes, the aspidistra is grown commercially for cut leaves, much as we grow and cut salal for shipping to city florists.

One surmises that part of the renewal of interest in the aspidistra has come through flower arranging design books written by city women in eastern cities, who have bought leaves from their florists. Even completely dried, the design potential of aspidistra leaves is considerable.

Today we can use these plants indoors in winter and put them out into north facing planters or patios for summer. Since they do not like frequent re-potting, they are indeed "easy care" plants — and easy to look at too.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

One of our nation's top-ranking bridge players is Ace Gutowsky. Back in the 1930s, Ace was a great professional football player who spent his Sunday afternoons serving as fullback for the Detroit Lions. In those days, his prime attribute was his ability to propel his 220-pound form through a horde of onrushing linemen.

When he retired from football, he set aside a portion of his leisure time for applying his brains instead of his brawn. He quickly became a "life master," the highest classification of bridge player in the American Contract Bridge League. Here is an example of his ability. The deal arose in a Detroit tournament. He was sitting in the East seat.

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ♣.

The jack of clubs was played from dummy on the opening lead. Had Gutowsky put up the queen, declarer would have fulfilled his contract with ease. He would have won the trick with the king, after which he would have led a spade, driving out East's ace. He would now have eight sure tricks; and the ninth would be made in either clubs (if East played back that suit), or in diamonds.

But Gutowsky did not put up the club queen. Instead he signalled encouragement by playing his nine-spot. The reason? A simple one for a man of expert ability.

West's deuce of clubs opening lead as his fourth highest, announced that West had exactly four clubs. Hence declarer had exactly two clubs. If declarer had the ace and king of clubs, then by putting up the queen, East would make a winner out of dummy's 10. And if South had the A-x of clubs, he could always make two club tricks whether East played his queen or didn't. As for the possibility that West was leading from the A-K-x-x of clubs, that didn't figure to be, since South had opened with one no-trump.

Upon winning trick one with the board's club jack, the spade queen was led, which Gutowsky took with his ace. He returned the three of clubs, South's king falling to West's ace. Another club lead by West now enabled East to cash his queen, after which the club four was led to West's six. Eventually West made his diamond king, for the setting trick.

$17M Donated

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Two prominent Yale University alumni have donated more than $17 million to the school. Yale president Kingman Brewster announced that the late Edwin J. Beinecke has bequeathed $15,348,000. Beinecke, a member of the class of 1907, was chairman of the board of the Sperry and Hutchinson Co. He died last January. The U.S. Ambassador to France, Arthur K. Watson, has given $1,919,000, Brewster said. Watson, a 1942 graduate, was chairman of the board of IBM World Trade Corp.

Burton's Dogs Unpopular

LONDON (AP) — Richard Burton's style in dogs has upset his new neighbors.

Burton and his wife, Elizabeth Taylor, recently took over a house in Hampstead, a north London suburb, and hired a security firm to provide guard dogs to thwart any attempt on Miss Taylor's jewels.

Now, residents have organized a petition asking the Burtons to get rid of the dogs.

EARTHA TO MARRY

CHICAGO (AP) — Danish electronics engineer Ole Brondun-Nielsen confirmed Monday that he and entertainer Eartha Kitt plan to get married—sometime in the future.

Brondun-Nielsen said he and Miss Kitt have not set a wedding date.

Miss Kitt announced her engagement to Brondun-Nielsen, director of a Danish electronics firm, two weeks ago on British television. Afterwards he said they had never discussed marriage.

Miser a Rewarding Evening

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Good pace, interesting and fresh production ideas, lively comic invention and one superb acting performance make Victoria Theatre Guild's DDF workshop production of The Miser a rewarding evening.

It is running this week at Langham Court Theatre, the successful result of five weeks' work under the guidance of Kenneth Dyba, visiting director supplied through a Canada Council grant.

In particular the production shines because of the presence of Carl Hare in the title role of the Moliere farce. This polished actor provides an in-depth characterization within the planned absurdities and slapstick of the piece.

And where the rest of the cast depends principally upon lines and situation to be funny, Hare's copious resources are within himself using the externals merely as stimulation.

In the same way his makeup—which is excellent—is only a small part of the wholly convincing portrait of desiccated age and inhumanity.

From the point of view only that one could wish to see Moliere's brilliant satirical comedy done to a turn, given such a central performance, it seems a pity that it could not have been surrounded by a cast of equal merit.

However that is not the object of the exercise in this instance and the several student actors give a promising account of themselves.

This is particularly true of Duncan Regehr, who holds his own well as Harpagon's (The Miser's) steward, Valere. He establishes and sustains the upright-to-the-point of priggishness hero, which is right within the context.

His voice and diction are excellent and he is able to balance the exaggerations of the role, such a way as to avoid parody.

It would be well if Blake Carter, who in many ways is pleasing, would slow up his rather headlong delivery of lines, and if both Susan Belford and Marjorie Bancroft—the two young girls who provide the romantic interest—concentrated on learning to use their hands with grace and effectiveness.

The women were less comfortable than the men throughout. Especially one was disappointed in Helen Smith, who surely could have made something of her own out of the character of the scheming Frosine.

Good bits of comedy come from Alan Wyatt and G. M. Hewlett, especially the former who is quite delightful.

As to the up-dated costumes, they are not intrusive and proved the Miser, with its lampooning of human greed and conniving, is timeless.

The set, mostly a dangling screen of ropes, has a cunning symbolism that is cleverly used at the very end, and the lighting works well.

SST Exhaust, Skin Cancer Linked

By LAWRENCE KNUTSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chemical reactions to exhausts from a fleet of supersonic transports could cause 10,000 new cases of skin cancer yearly in the United States, a research scientist has told two members of Congress.

The two legislators charge the Nixon administration—which defeated a crucial Senate vote on a $290 million SST appropriation Thursday—suppressed the finding.

The finding was reported to have been made to the transportation department Monday by Dr. James E. McDonald, a professor of atmospheric physics at the University of Arizona. He worked on an SST climate and weather modification board of the National Academy of Sciences.

In a joint statement given to the Associated Press, Senator William Proxmire (Dem., Wis.) and Representative Morris Udall (Dem., Ariz.) said:

"These findings by a reputable scientist assigned this study by the National Academy of Science are much too important to be ignored.

"We believe they are more than sufficient reason to withhold further funding of the SST until they are either disproved or found in error in some significant respect."

But Surgeon-General Jesse Steinfeld took issue with the cancer cause suggestion.

In a statement, he cautioned against use of data gathered at a time when scientists knew less about the relations between skin cancer and sunlight.

Proxmire and Udall, however, said McDonald's findings should be taken seriously.

In the process of his investigation, they said, he disproved a much-publicized fear about the consequences of SST flights: That a fleet of planes could pump so much water vapor into the atmosphere that resulting ice crystals could cause significant changes in weather and climate.

But his analysis indicated that projected levels of SST operations could reduce stratospheric ozone and thus increase... ultraviolet radiation by amounts large enough to lead to perhaps 10,000 new cases of skin cancer in the U.S. a year.

Strengthened Municipal Role Urged in Briefs

By JOE DUPUIS

TORONTO (CP) — Advocates of city states with autonomous powers to cope with mounting urban problems were told Monday to seek help from provincial governments and "turf them out" if that help was not given.

Some members of the joint Commons-Senate committee, opening Toronto hearings Monday, took exception to several briefs that sought a strengthened role for municipal governments under a new constitution.

The 21-member committee, under chairman Mark MacGuigan, Liberal MP for Windsor-Walkerville, moves to Hamilton tonight, continuing a series of cross-Canada hearings to hear public views on the constitution.

Two of the briefs Monday calling for special powers for cities, from Stephen Clarkson and Claire McLaughlin, both city municipal Liberals, were criticized.

Colin Gibson, Liberal MP from Hamilton-Wentworth, taking exception to what he described as "the big-city myth", told Mr. Clarkson the people should "turf out" the provincial government if it was not reacting to urban demands "instead of setting up another level of government."

POWER FOR CITIES

Mr. Clarkson had urged that cities be given a voice at the national level because power "should be vested where the problems are . . . where the people are best able to deal with an issue . . . at the neighborhood, urban, regional or national level."

Mrs. McLaughlin, policy chairman for the Toronto and District Liberal Association, called for constitutional status for large cities. They should be given a form of legislature similar to senior levels of government with "realistic taxation powers to guarantee the cities a completely autonomous tax base."

Walter Dinsdale, former federal resources minister, said there had been "a great diversity of opinion on this subject as we moved across the country," and suggested the solution may lie with satellite cities to avoid urban over-concentration.

But the most stinging criticism was reserved for Prof. Albert S. Abel, University of Toront professor, who proposed that equalization grants for have-not areas should be taken away from Ottawa and placed in the hands of a tough, indepedent, non-political body.

Senator Eugene Forsey, constitutional expert, called the proposition revolutionary. "You're taking away powers the national Parliament should have, if we are to have a Parliament at all, and handing it to" the provinces, he said.

Prof. Abel, admitting his reforms may be "ahead of our time," also proposed a new constitution that would restrict the federal powers to economic planning and external affairs, leaving the rest to the strengthened provinces.

These Committees Go on Forever . . .

If certain recommendations are accepted, the status of women commission will have spawned a trio of further committees and commissions:

1. Implementation committees, to plan how to put into effect the report's 167 recommendations.

2. A human rights commission for every province and for the federal government, with wide powers to protect all Canadians, not just women. The report estimates special divisions to deal with discrimination about women would be needed for seven to 10 years.

3. A national status-of-women council to undertake research on matters relevant to women, propose legislation and policy, consult provincial women's bureaus and volunteer organizations and form a link with the United Nations Commission on the Status of Women.

They'd Be Happy At Royal Roads

Another commission recommendation proposed that women be admitted to military colleges and allowed to enlist in the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Commenting on the proposal, Royal Roads registrar Michael Meiklejohn said, enthusiastically, "Oh, isn't that a lovely one!"

There are already three women students registered at the college for extension courses provided by Royal Roads faculty," Meiklejohn pointed out.

As to full-time women cadets, the registrar is certain "it will come in course."

"Women are just as capable as men in running a war or a peace," he believes citing his observations in Yugoslavia where women in the army shared equality, for better or for worse.

As for the present cadets, Meiklejohn felt it was safe to assume that male cadets would be in favor of admitting women to the colleges as fellow-students.

"It would solve a number of problems."

Superintendent Ross Pilkey, administrative officer for E Division, was puzzled when asked to comment on the recommendation that enlistment in the RCMP be open to women.

"There are a great many women in the RCMP now," he said. "One of the top fingerprint experts at headquarters in Ottawa is a woman."

They are civilian members of the RCMP, he explained, and have all the rights and privileges of members of the force except that they are not peace officers. "This means they cannot make an arrest," he said.

Superintendent Pilkey said that they thought of such women as experts and members of the force and he did not understand what more the commission could want.

"Unless the commission wants them to ride in the musical ride," he said.

The report also suggests the federal government could provide similar funds for men and women for university training, in return for a commitment to work in a developing area such as Canada's north after graduation.

Lynn Brassington of Uvic firmly agreed with this recommendation.

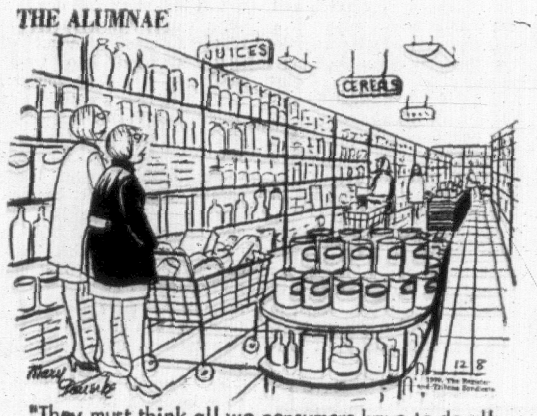
In a chapter on women and education, the commission says Canadian girls are being subtly influenced by textbooks portraying women as passive creatures with limited choices in life.

The commission calls this "sex-typing" and says it is found in the educational system from kindergarten on.

Lynn Brassington felt that in many cases the development set up now was psychologically deterring to most enthusiastic females. Most fields are dominated by men. Perhaps women receiving special funds would be given more encouragement by male professors, and not made to feel like observers instead of worthy contributors.

ANNE FRANCIS BIRD

THE ALUMNAE



"They must think all we consumers have to do all day is consume, consume, consume!"

Victoria Comments on Commission

When Anne Francis Bird, chairman of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women, was in Victoria in 1968 for the commission's first public hearings, she commented in an interview:

"I like Margaret Mead's remark. 'The time has passed when women can afford not to be involved in the society in which they live.'" Equal opportunities bring equal responsibilities."

The report tabled in Parliament Monday stressed both.

Victorians asked to comment on the commission and its recommendations agreed with a number of points but did not hail the report as a miraculous break for the future of Canadian women.

Helen O'Malia, aldermanic candidate in Esquimalt, feels that "common sense" could have provided most of the recommendations of the commission at much less expense.

Mrs. O'Malia agrees with commissioner John Humphrey that the quota system proposed by the commission to guarantee women seats in government is ridiculous.

"It's as silly as to demand a place in government because you have blue eyes," she said. She feels that women can make it on their own abilities and avoid preferential treatment.

Mrs. O'Malia was referring to Ottawa reports that Humphrey, one of the two men on the seven-member royal commission team, dissociated himself from the commission report, which he says will introduce new kinds of social discrimination.

The report recommended that two qualified women from each province be summoned to the Senate as seats become vacant, until a more equitable membership is achieved.

This would establish a quota for women senators, an insult to Canadian women who are capable of standing on their own feet, Humphrey said in a minority report.

The report has also recommended that the federal government give a mother a taxable cash allowance of $500 a year for each child under 16 years of age.

Humphrey, a law professor at McGill University, says he cannot accept recommendations that family allowances be greatly increased, since this would encourage larger families when population is a major world problem.

Elizabeth Murrison, who runs an abortion counselling service, agrees with the commissioner.

She feels the proposal would encourage people to have more children. She would rather see tax penalties imposed on families with more than two children.

Mrs. O'Malia, aldermanic candidate in Esquimalt, called the proposal "ridiculous."

Canada should permit abortion on demand for any woman pregnant 12 weeks or less, the majority report recommended.

The report also recommends that an abortion be permitted at the request of a woman pregnant more than 12 weeks if continuation of the pregnancy will endanger her physical or mental health or if there is danger that the

Commission Said To Be a Bargain

The Royal commission on the status of women has been plagued by murmurs of public discontent since it was first brought into being by the Pearson government in February, 1967.

Charlotte Whitton was outspoken as usual.

"It's the most fantastically-inexcusable thing I've ever heard of. I've been opposed to it from the beginning. The doors are open now, if women don't want to be sissy-pussies making sandwiches in the ladies' auxiliary."

Two years after the commission was set up its expenses had risen to just over $1 million.

That figure included $37,787 in salary and $4,455 in expenses for the chairman. Salaries for the six other commissioners at that time ranged from $11,925 to $25,350, with expenses from $2,767 to $11,978.

Salaries for senior staff members ranged from $10,500 to $42,966.

By June 1970, estimates were given suggesting that expenses would total $1,779,869 by the time the report was presented.

No final figures are available so far, but the commission members have always prided themselves on their careful budgeting.

They were congratulated by the supervisor of the royal comissions for the Privy Council, who told chairman Anne Francis Bird that she had done well in keeping the budget down.

At the same time, he drew her attention to the frugality of Chief Justice Dana Porter whose three-year commission on banking and finance ended in 1964 after spending only $747,000.

Suppose your washing machine goes on the blink right after you move into a new town. You're miles away from the dealer you bought it from and you don't know the name of a reliable serviceman. Where can you turn for help?

Or what if your refrigerator breaks down just after you've loaded it with a week's supply of food. Where are you going to find someone to fix it fast?

Well, if it's an Inglis appliance, your search is ended. You just call the number listed above. Collect. Any time of the day or night.

When you call, an Inglis Service Technician will answer. (If a woman answers, don't hang up, that's our answering service.) Our Technician will give you the name and number of the Inglis Service Centre nearest your home. Which means that your appliance will be repaired by men trained and authorized by Inglis. Men who know every Inglis appliance inside and out.

So if you own an Inglis appliance, we suggest you cut out our number and paste it somewhere on the machine. And if you don't own an Inglis, we suggest you save it anyway, because someday you might.

child will be greatly handicapped.

In Victoria Elizabeth Murrison, who runs an abortion counselling service, said that the commission's recommendations will not change the law on abortion.

She hopes that the report will help influence the government to change the prohibitions in the Criminal Code governing abortion.

The commission also recommended a guaranteed annual income for men and women who are heads of one-parent families.

"We recognize in principle the benefits of a guaranteed annual income for all Canadians," the commission says.

"As a first step the income should be granted where the need is greatest, that is to single parents and especially to sole-support mothers who as a group represent a major category among the nation's poor."

Bernice Packford, social worker, is in favor of the recommended guaranteed income for single parents with dependent children. "Most of the poor fall into this category," she said.

She would like to know the amount of the guaranteed income before she gave unqualified support to the recommendation, but said, "All Canadians below the poverty level should receive a decent middle-class income which would provide money for recreation and some luxuries, not just necessities."

The commission also expressed concern about the elderly poor.

It recommends that the guaranteed income supplement to the old-age security benefits should be increased until the old person's annual income rises above the poverty level, and should be adjusted to the cost of living index.

Catherine Horne, director of the Silver Threads Services, feels that no one could disagree with the recommendation.

"The situation of some old people is getting worse all the time," she said. She feels that inflation is out of hand and is eating into the capital of retired people.

Vancouver-born Elinor Bertram, will be soloist at the annual Christmas tea and musical program presented by the Womens' Canadian Club, at the Empress Hotel, Wednesday, at 3 p.m. Mrs. Bertram will be assisted by her daughter Andrea, a first-year student at Uvic.

fashion flashes

At-home pants will be made in fluid jersey or heavy crepe, just a simple tunic and flowing pants, to be jeweled up according to your fantasy.

The coat will become part of a costume, sometimes knee-length over a reflex-length matching dress, sometimes a midi over a skirt and a turtleneck.

The embroidered look will appear on midi coats, in flowers on white vinyl for a rain trenchcoat, in peasant bands on black wool or even on fur.

The maxi coat will be popular for evening, in pale wool as Mainbocher launched it in the Forties, in broadtail with braid trim or a caftan look.

Look for the combination of fabric and fake fur, done by top names like Valentino, the pretend leopard set in as side panels on the bodice.

The cape will return as another kind of coat, in wool reversing to fur or pile, in crushed velvet for evening, always midi or longer.

Cherry Cake From the Black Forest

BLACK FOREST CHERRY CAKE

5 egg whites
½ tsp. cream of tartar
½ cup granulated sugar
5 egg yolks
⅔ cup granulated sugar
3 tbsp. water
1 tsp. vanilla
¾ cup sifted cake and pastry flour
¼ cup cocoa
¼ tsp. salt

2½ cups canned sweet black cherries and juice
2½ tbsp. cornstarch
3 tbsp. granulated sugar
1 tbsp. Kirsch (a cherry liqueur)

½ cup granulated sugar
2 tbsp. water
Pinch of cream of tartar
1 egg white
Pinch of salt
½ tsp. vanilla
½ cup soft butter
1 ounce semi-sweet chocolate, melted and cooled.

½ pint (1¼ cups) whipping cream
2 tbsp. icing sugar
1 tbsp. Kirsch
Chocolate curls
Whole stemmed maraschino cherries

For the Cake: Preheat oven to 325 deg. F. Beat the 5-egg whites and the ½ teaspoon cream of tartar until frothy throughout. Very gradually beat in the ½ cup granulated sugar and continue to beat until meringue forms stiff peaks. Beat egg yolks and ⅔ cup granulated sugar until light. Stir in the 3 tablespoons of water and the 1 teaspoon vanilla. Sift together the flour, cocoa and the ¼ teaspoon salt. Sift flour mixture over egg yolk mixture, part at a time, folding gently after each addition. Gently fold in meringue. Pour batter into two ungreased 9-inch round layer cake pans. Bake in preheated oven 30 to 35 minutes. Invert pans on wire racks and cool 10 minutes. Remove from pans and cool completely.

For the Filling: Pit cherries. Combine cornstarch and the 3 tablespoons sugar in a saucepan. Gradually stir in cherries and juice. Cook over medium heat stirring constantly until thickened and clear and mixture comes to the boil. Cover and continue to cook over low heat 3 to 5 minutes stirring occasionally. Cool. Stir in the 1 tablespoon Kirsch. Chill.

For the Buttercream: Combine the ½ cup granulated sugar, the 2 tablespoons water and pinch of cream of tartar in a saucepan. Bring to a boil over medium heat, stirring until sugar is dissolved. Boil without stirring to soft ball stage, 238 deg. F., on a candy thermometer or when a small amount of syrup dropped into water forms a soft ball. Meanwhile, beat the 1 egg white and pinch of salt until soft peaks form. Continue beating, slowly, pour hot syrup into egg whites in thin stream, being careful not to hit beaters. Beat until mixture is thick and cooled slightly. Beat in the ½ teaspoon vanilla; cool. Cream butter until light and fluffy. Beat in egg white mixture 1 tablespoon at a time. Beat in chocolate. Chill, if necessary, until spreading consistency.

To Assemble: Place one cake layer on plate. Make a border of buttercream around the edge of the cake and spread remainder in a circle in centre of cake. Spread cooled thickened cherry mixture between buttercream border and centre. Place second layer on top; press down gently. Whip cream until softly stiff; beat in icing sugar and 1 tablespoon Kirsch. Frost and decorate sides and top of cake. Gently press chocolate curls into the cream on the sides of the cake and garnish with whole cherries. Refrigerate until serving time.

ASK ADELE

Uniforms Defended

Dear Adele,

I'd just like to comment on a letter I noticed in your column from a girl who hates her private school uniform. I understand why she hates it, as I go to the same school. I dislike the uniform too but I wear it because I understand why we do wear them, not to separate us from public schools but to teach us discipline, individuality, and that the greatest things in life are immaterial. If we didn't wear uniforms it would defeat the whole purpose of the school. For us all to look alike teaches us the importance of thinking differently, of being an individual, for there is a lot more to individuality than dressing differently.

We are not "put down" by public schools very often, and if we are, who cares? There are many people who have many misconceptions about private school girls, but these are the people who haven't really gotten to know us. I am afraid I disagree with you completely on the aspect of uniforms. Sure we hate our hats but in life there are going to be lots of things we must do which we'd rather not, and these years of wierd uniforms and rigid discipline help to prepare us for that.

I know this is long but I'd appreciate it if you print it to show people another view, and hopefully clear up some misunderstandings.

A Norfolk Girl.

Dear Norfolk Girl,

First, I don't know for sure that the other gal who wrote was speaking of your school and your uniforms.

Second, I agree that there are definite bonds between rigidity, discipline and some sort of uniform. All these things do kind of tie in.

Third, don't get me wrong. As the old saying goes, "Some of my best friends" went to private school, some attended the particular one you go to. Also, in my work as a child guidance social worker, I've occasionally recommended private school for a girl or fellow who had special needs that were not being filled by public school. And last (and least) we'll have to agree to disagree on the overall question of uniforms, as I still feel by and large they're a drag.

But I sure appreciate your letter, and print it with pleasure to show the other side of the debate. Any other people want to join in the rebuttal? Just drop me a line, to Ask Adele, c-o The Times, Douglas Street, Victoria.

Here are a few more of those reasons thought up by grade 10 pupils when they were asked why my column was replacing Dear Abby twice a week. (I'm including these by popular demand.)

1. To brake (sic) the monotony.

2. Some people like a change. People might think Abby doesn't give sufficient answers. This way they might at least for two days get someone they like.

3. Perhaps they're trying to recruit local talent.

It was lots of fun receiving these comments, and I hope to print a few more next week for comic relief. Bye for now.

Adele

Women's Lib a 'White Political Fad'

By RENEE FERGUSON
The Washington Post

The Women's Liberation Movement touches some sensitive nerves among black women—but they are not always the nerves the movement seems to touch among so many whites.

Dr. Anna Hedgeman, for instance, who takes pride in the fact that she lived in Harlem for most of the 30 years she has lived in New York, is a strong advocate of the Women's Liberation Movement. She believes that there is no way in which black women in America are uninvolved in the movement. "We as Afro-American women have to face the problems of total discrimination in our society," Dr. Hedgeman says. "We have had the extra burden of being women. But if you just review the problems that women face you need only substitute the world Afro-American people for the word women and you have the same problems—job discrimination, want ads that discriminate and false stereotypes."

On the other hand, Howard University Senior and Student Association Secretary Pamely Preston doesn't think that The Women's Liberation Movement has any meaning for black women. "As far as I'm concerned The Women's Liberation Movement is trite, trivial and simple.

"It's just another white political fad," Miss Preston says. "Black people have some of the same problems that they had when they were first brought to this country. That's what we've got to deal with."

If the relatively modest turnout of black women for the recent women's liberation day demonstrations is any indication of the black women's interest in the movement, then perhaps Miss Preston's attitude is indicative of the way most black women feel.

In a 1963 article which appeared in The Washington Post, the president of The National Council of Negro Women, Dorothy Height, said, "A Negro woman has the same kind of problems as other women, but she can't take the same things for granted. For instance, she has to raise children who seldom have the same sense of security that white children have when they see their father accepted as a successful member of the community. A Negro child's father is ignored as though he didn't exist."

Singer Marjorie Barnes, in citing the problems of the instability of black families as one of her main reasons for non-involvement in The Women's Liberation Movement, says "I don't think that black women can afford to be competitive with their men — especially now. Competing with them for jobs would just add to the problem that already exists. Black women have been able to find work when their husbands couldn't and have often been the head of the family not because they wanted to be but out of economic necessity. Some of these women's lib girls are asking for jobs that black men haven't been able to get."

Wjen asked to describe the black sterotypical woman Miss Preston replies: "Black women are pictured by some segments of white society and even by some black men as loud, obstinate, domineering, emasculating and generally immoral that old Sapphire image. In contrast white women are stereotyped as—blue-eyed, virtuous, to-be-put-on-pedestal types. But I don't think it's going to take any women's liberation movement to remove those stereotypes."

Miss Height believes that the main black stereotype of black women pictures them as the domineering matriarch.

"There is a complete denial by this society of the fact that since the slave ships brought the black woman to this country she has had to hold the family together," Miss Height says. "She has been forced into a position of responsibility. These stereotypes have even caused the black male to think that he is dominated. The whole culture downgrades women. White women aren't treated as real human beings. They must be subservient to the male and are at his mercy for being called either beautiful and dumb or smart and aggressive.

Perhaps the lack of involvement of black women in The Women's Liberation Movement can best be explained in terms of priorities of black women vs. the priorities of white women.

Obviously the first priority of virtually all black people is the elimination of racial prejudice in America — in effect the liberation of black people. Second in importance is the black family problem of establishing a decent way of life in America as it exists today. When racism in America is eliminated, then perhaps the black family's stability problem will disappear and more black women will be able to give first priority to the elimination of oppression because of sex.

SHE HAS DONE HER HOMEWORK, BUT HAS UTAH?

A Housewife Fights Big Industry on Pollution

By DONNA CLEMENTS

MAPLE BAY — Cowichan Valley harbors B.C.'s most ardent band of anti-pollution guerrillas.

The latest member of the Cowichan-Malahat branch of SPEC to hit the headlines is Mrs. Elaine Price, a retired registered nurse and mother of grown children.

She journeyed at her own expense to remote Port Hardy to qualify as one of the four objectors last week at the pollution control board hearing on Utah's Construction and Mining Company's application to dump 9.3 million gallons of effluent daily into Rupert Inlet.

In an interview at her Maple Bay home, she said she first felt the impact of what pollution could destroy after she read Silent Spring by Rachael Carson eight years ago.

"The book discussed environmental problems we are going to encounter through pesticides,"

Mrs. Price said she continued her education on pollution by reading newspapers, articles and following discussions on television.

Mrs. Price said she became particularly active in her fight against pollution when she joined SPEC which was formed over a year ago.

"SPEC has stimulated a lot of interest," she said.

In the 22 years she has lived in the Cowichan Valley, Mrs. Price said she has noticed the deterioration in the beaches, decrease of birds and many other changes in the environment she feels are caused by pollution.

"Ecologists and environmental experts, not in the service of industry or government, agree we simply cannot continue to dispose of the quantity of wastes modern man and industry are discharging into the air, water and soil and still survive.

MRS. PRICE

"The only part they do not agree upon is the length of time we can survive under these conditions," she stressed.

"I object to any individual or industry continuing their practice of pollution but I vehemently object to Utah Mining, in the face of available ecological facts, to begin discharging wastes into our already overburdened environment."

As a member of SPEC Mrs. Price said she has learned to properly attack the question at hand.

"It would require the efforts of a number of experts," she said.

"The issue of pollution is a moral one and I do not believe that anyone, for profit or any other motive, has the option of contaminating our ceans. General good intentions are not enough today, we must have honest ecological answers.

"Must we wait until pollution is well established and then prepare to prosecute? Is it really necessary to keep expanding this destructive process? Surely the problem should not be to punish polluters but to prevent pollution. Under all circumstances a certain amount of risk is involved. We can no longer afford to gamble and perhaps destroy a natural heritage—the only obstacle is cost."

Mrs. Price said "We tend to think of technology as progress but the objections of a concerned public who will have to live with the results of this technology should be well considered before final decisions are made. Industry seems unable to relate their actions today with consequences we may suffer tomorrow."

Mrs. Price said the Utah issue has been a real experience right from the day she wrote her letter of protest on Nov. 21 along with 140 more objectors.

She said she can easily understand why only four of the total objectors appeared at the hearing protest.

After receiving a reply from the pollution control board to ascertain whether she was objecting to the dumping of tailings or 15,000 gallons daily of secondary treated effluent into Rupert Inlet, Mrs. Price said she was then requested to send a technical brief.

Before she prepared her layman's brief, stressing she has no technical background but is a concerned citizen, Mrs. Price wrote to director William Venables saying she felt he was trying to write ordinary citizens off the slate.

She also objected to a mere technicality preventing briefs from organizations such as the Richmond Anti-Pollution Association and Cowichan-Malahat SPEC from being heard.

When she toured the Utah construction site last Tuesday Mrs. Price said she was shocked at the amount of construction done without the assurance of a permit to dump the tailings into Rupert Inlet.

"When I asked if there were alternate ways of dumping tailings I was advised they could be dumped on land but it wasn't as safe as the inlet," she explained. "They said if they didn't get a permit for the inlet they would apply for a permit for land."

Mrs. Price said she felt

MORTON
. . . 'I have watched'

Venables conducted the hearing fairly. She is hopeful he will not issue a permit to Utah.

"My feeling is that Utah has to do a lot more homework than it has. Even as a layman I could see there hasn't been sufficient research done."

Mrs. Price feels that pollution fighting has a dubious future if more people don't get involved.

"I think SPEC is getting places. Individuals couldn't make an impact on the public like SPEC has through the news media.

"Generally the public are apathetic but pollution has become such a word. A while ago few were talking about pollution and now, two years later, everyone is talking about it."

Mrs. Price said she thinks it is "tremendous that unions are now interested in fighting pollution. It is never too late."

She feels pollution may be stopped if everyone got behind the campaign.

"I really want to encourage people to write to their MLAs and MPs" when they read or hear something that disturbs them," she said.

Ralph Morton, of Cowichan Station, one of the founders of the local SPEC group, and another official objector at the hearing, agreed with Mrs. Price's feeling that Utah has not done enough research to qualify for a permit to dump tailings into Rupert Inlet.

Morton, an employee at Crofton pulp mill, has lived on Vancouver Island all his life.

"From a very early age I have been aware of the close relationship between man and his natural surroundings. Thus I am vitally concerned in what is happening to our environment.

"I have watched the hills beind denuded and the scars of 'progress' defacing the landscape. Lately the pace has been accelerating until now beaches where I used to play and swim are too polluted for my children to enjoy. Streams that once ran clear all year are dry in the summer and muddy torrents in winter.

"The air which was clean and fresh before is now unbelievably foul in some areas of the Island. Gradually we are realizing that what has been considered primarily an affront to our aesthetic sense is also a threat to our survival.

"As the environment is being remodelled to suit the economy of man some of the other forms of life are quietly disappearing from the scene. Now we can see that a place for a man has been reserved in this parade to extinction."

Although both Mrs. Price and Morton are members of the local SPEC group, they both stressed they attended the Utah hearing as private citizens.

Cowichan To Proceed With Gyms

DUNCAN — Gyms will be constructed at Alexander, Crofton and Mill Bay elementary schools, Dave Haywood, chairman of the Cowichan School Board, announced Monday.

Haywood said the go-ahead is due to the provincial government releasing its share of the school district's 1966 referendum.

"It appears the economy of the Social Credit government is on the upgrade," he commented.

The department of education advised that the total shareable amount of Cowichan's basic education program is $3,816,645.

Haywood said the government shares 37 per cent of the total.

"The board has the ability of an additional 10 per cent of the total budget to be financed 100 per cent locally."

Ship Partner Admits 'Loss of Confidence'

Defence counsel David Williams attempted to show that as early as 1968 there had been erosion of confidence between Hummel and his business partners, Marquardt and the late William Osland.

Hummel admitted there had been "undercurrents I didn't understand" in the period May-June, 1969, when he was overruled in matters concerning a project to convert a 290-foot vessel into a marine attraction by Marquardt and California participants in the venture.

The crown alleges Marquardt defrauded V.I. Shipyards Ltd. of $22,000 during the course of the project.

A Victoria group, headed by Osland, Hummel and Marquardt, purchased the coastal freighter Robert Emery in 1966 and brought it to Victoria where preliminary conversion work was to take place.

EXPERIENCE

American interests were later brought into the company (Seaview Enterprises Ltd.) because they had experience in converting a former CPR vessel, the Princess Louise.

In February, 1969, the Robert Emery sailed to San Francisco where final conversion work was to be completed and the ship moored at Fisherman's Wharf.

A civic inauguration ceremony was held in May, 1969, but the scheme ran into trouble over a number of items, such as the drab appearance of the vessel, unsafe condition of the gangplank, and a faulty water filtration system.

The ship was eventually seized by a bank which had made a loan toward the project, and disposed of at a foreclosure sale.

War Criminal Tried

FRANKFURT (Reuter) — A former member of the Nazi SS, Adolf Strohammer, went on trial here Monday accused of complicity in the murder of several thousand Jews in the Soviet Union in 1941 and 1942. Strohhammer has admitted the shootings took place but said the SS commandos unit he led was told the victims were partisan guerrillas.

EDDIE'S FATHER. 7 p.m., Channel 8. Mrs. Livingston departs, because she feels that Eddie is growing too attached to her. But first, she leaves father and son prepared to learn for themselves the agonies of unkempt bachelorhood.

THE MOD SQUAD 7:30 p.m., Channel 4 and 8. "The Judas Trap." There's more than the average good guest cast acting tonight, with Don Porter and young Barry Brown supplying most of it. Teen-ager Brown plays the difficult role of a 17-year-old with a 12-year-old mentality. Porter is a college dean to whom the boy shows a particular fondness. The squad gets involved with the youngster when they find him wandering with a rifle in hand and discover it's the wapon used to kill his father. If you recognize one of those "meaniest crimes" in the plot, you're right.

THE WORLD OF THE BEAVER 7:30 p.m., Channel 5. (Repeat.) No animal in history has had his life and lore more fully documented than the ambitious beaver. It was a question when this special was first telecast last year why we were getting another "beaver" story, and now we wonder again why the repeat. The script is also quite familiar, beginning with the two-year-old beaver leaving his family "lodge" and starting out on his own. Henry Fonda narrates.

THE MOVIE OF THE WEEK 8:30 p.m., Channel 4. "Weekend of Terror." Robert Conrad, Carol Lynley, Lee Majors, Louis Nettleton and Jane Wyatt star in an excellent depiction of the terrors human beings can inflict on the spirit. Conrad and Majors are kidnappers who are frustrated by the accidental death of their victim. They have no concern for human life, only for the ransom the death may cheat them of. When they run into three nuns, they recognize one as a double for victim, and take all three captive. The three are held in deadly cold conditions, with the knowledge that all, at least two of them, die. Now, the battle of the flesh and the spirit takes over.

PETULA. 9 p.m., Channel 8. This simple title doesn't tell the full tale. It sounds like a one-woman show but there's far more than Petula Clark to this production. There's Peggy Lee, stealing much of Miss Clark's thunder soloing "What Are You Doing the Rest of Your Life?" and joining her hostess for "I'm a Woman." There's also David Frost who graciously granted his countrywoman permission to make him comedy relief. He does it by letting her interview him, almost. There's also Dean Martin in far more than a cameo. He sings "I Don't Know Why" and "Detour" with Pet. And finally, there's the Everly Brothers with "Let It Be." Petula's feature is a production of "Come Together" with the dancers and singers.

TUESDAY NIGHT AT THE MOVIES. 9 p.m., Channel 5. "Breakout." James Drury and Kathryn Hays star in this "World Premiere" presentation, a prison flick with many of the old ploys and plots of similar films in the 40s and 50s. Drury is a convicted bank robber dreaming of bein reuinted with his wife, and the $50,000 loot from the heist. He'll be too old to enjoy either if he waits for his release, so he is plotting an escape. A complication arises when the convicts go to the prison camp from which they hope to run off, and learn they've been named volunteers in the search for a lost boy. Sean Garrison, Red Buttons and Woody Strode are featured.

MARCUS WELBY M.D. 10 p.m., Channel 4. "To Carry the Sun in a Golden Cup." A young and apparently mentally healthy young nurse is the cause of some frustrating questions in the medical mind of Dr. Welby. He has diagnosed a muscular condition as an inherited disease. However, in questioning the girl's family, he can find no trace of it. Either the family is hiding some critical information, or his diagnosis is inaccurate, and the girl in great danger.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

One of the most difficult problems that many physicians have to face is that of selecting the best method of treatment for a patient with a cancer that cannot be removed surgically, perhaps because it is in some place inaccessible to the surgeon, or because it has invaded so much of the body that it would be futile to try to remove it all.

I was interested in what Dr. Ruth J. Guttman, a New York radiologist, had to say on this subject at a meeting of the American Roentgen Ray Society. Dr. Guttman got remarkably good results in 16 patients with serious inoperable cancer, in many cases a cancer of the stomach. They lived a surprisingly long time after radiologic treatment. In every case, the diagnosis was backed up with the results of microscopic examination of the cancerous tissue, and in all the cases, surgery had been impossible.

Remarkably, radiation gave these patients many symptom-free years of life. Among the most spectacular were four patients with liposarcomas (lipo is fat, and sarco is flesh, so the tumor is fleshy in nature) and three with fibrosarcomas (tumors made of fibrous tissue plus flesh). These patients were given treatment with a two million volt unit. One of the men so treated has now been alive and without symptoms and without evidence of cancerous disease for 17 years. Another patient with a liposarcoma has been doing well for nine years.

Two of the patients with cancers of their stomach (gastric carcinomas) survived "a surprisingly long time." Two patients with cancer of their bones (osteosarcoma) did well, and one was alive and without symptoms 12 years later.

Dr. Guttman tells of other patients who survived longer than would be expected, after having the radiation treatments. I like to write about such hopeful reports because so often when a person receives a diagnosis of cancer and especially if it is the type that cannot be quickly treated surgically, he feels that he is hopeless. It is often possible to cheer such a person, by reminding him that some people are highly resistant to the cancer cells, and it may be that his body will put up a good fight against them.

NATO Arms Aid to Portugal Draws Fire in Security Council

By ROBERT H. ESTABROOK

UNITED NATIONS (WP) — NATO arms aid to Portugal came under heavy attack in the security council Monday as Afro-Asian countries sought to penalize the Lisbon government for the Nov. 22 attack on Guinea.

A five-nation Security Council mission, which visited Guinea, blamed the invasion on military and naval units of the Portuguese armed forces operating from neighboring Portuguese Guinea (Biassau). Guinean political exiles were also said to have participated.

Afro-Asian delegations introduced a resolution Monday night which would "strongly condemn" Portugal, demand compensation for Guinea and, without specifically mentioning NATO, request all countries to end any arms assistance to Portugal.

Original language warning Portugal that in the event of repetition the Security Council would meet to take action under Chapter VII of the United Nations Charter — dealing with sanctions — was softened to delete the direct reference to Chapter VII.

This move was intended to relieve western qualms about the invocation of Chapter VII, since the original version could have commanded the votes of only 7 of the 15 council members.

One council member said Monday night that the new version probably will obtain 11 favorable votes this afternoon, with the United States, Britain and France abstaining because of the veiled NATO reference and Spain because of its close relations with Portugal.

Finnish Ambassador Max Jakobson, himself a member of the mission to Guinea, urged that the council condemn Portugal and call on the Lisbon government to recognize the right of the people in Portuguese overseas provinces to self-determination.

Jakobson, who proposed the recent initiative for periodic high-level meetings of the Security Council, saw the mission as an important new stage in council evolution. He said the impact of the report would be weakened if the council failed to agree.

Portugal's NATO connection was the target of numerous speeches in morning and afternoon sessions Monday.

Council President Yakob Malik of the Soviet Union had sought in his speech Saturday to identify the North Altantic alliance with Portuguese colonialism.

Monday's big four meeting on the Middle East was postponed until Wendesday because of the extended Security Council sessions.

In other actions at the U.N.:

● The General Assembly voted to establish the United Nations Volunteers, an international youth corps of economic development workers modeled partly on the Peace Corps.

The volunteers, a particular project of Princess Ashraf Pahlavi of Iran, will come into existence Jan. 1 and will be administered by the U.N. development program. The vote was 91-0 with 12 abstentions.

● Secretary General U Thant announced the reappointment of Paul G. Hoffman as UNDP administrator for the year 1971.

● Opposition by Communist countries, some Arab states and India blocked a resolution in the General Assembly social committee to create a U.N. commissioner for human rights. Strongly supported by the U.S. and other western countries, the Costa Rican proposal for a sort of U.N. ombudsman became the victim of a filibuster aimed at deferring a vote until next year.

● The assembly approved a western-sponsored resolution extending present military and diplomatic efforts for the defence and unification of Korea. Communist countries fought the measure, which was passed 67-20 with 22 abstentions.

● Responding to what has been depicted as the desperate financial plight of the U.N. Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA) for Palestine refugees, the assembly established a nine-member working group to study the problem and report by next Monday — only a day before the assembly's scheduled adjournment.

U.K. Labor Woes Worst Since '26

By CY FOX

LONDON (CP) — An unofficial protest strike affecting a variety of industries today compounded the problems caused by electrical blackouts as Britain continued to suffer the consequences of its worst attack of labor unrest since 1926, the year of the general strike.

The blackouts caused in many parts of the country by the slowdown at power stations throughout Britain were even more widespread than on Monday, the first day of the electricity employees' work-to-rule.

The extra upsets today resulted from the one-day strike launched by militant trade unionists is protest against the Conservative government's bill for reform of labor relations.

Communists and other leaders of the strike, who predicted that between 500,000 and one million workers would come out, said operations at London's Heathrow Airport would be hit by the stoppage, in addition to the expected paralysis of such major ports as Southampton and Tyneside on the east coast.

A number of wholesale food markets, schools and car factories also were affected by the strike.

Britain's national newspapers did not appear as a result of the support given the protest strike by some printers and electricians in London and additional complications in Manchester.

In the capital, where longshoremen have joined the strike, a big march was planned for the day as a gesture of hostility towards the Labor Relations Bill.

The power employees are working by the book to support their demand for a pay raise. They are asking the nationalized Power Authority for about $15 more a week, which would give them a basic wage of about $72. The government has made a "final" offer of $5.

Cartoonist Goldberg Dies at 87

Born Rueben Lucius Goldberg in San Francisco July 4, 1883, he won the Pulitzer Prize in 1948 for political cartoons but was best known for his bumbling characters and the weird contraptions he designed.

The contraptions made his name synonymous with any thing that was so complicated as to be funny. "It's a real Rube Goldberg," was a saying that became popular in North America.

Goldberg was the creator of such popular cartoon figures in the 1920s and 1930s as Boob McNutt, Lala Lalooza, Professor Lucifer Gorgonzola Butts and the team of Mike and Ike.

Goldberg started his career as a cartoonist on the San Francisco Chronicle in 1904 and moved to the San Francisco Bulletin a year later. In 1907 he moved to New York to start a career which was to lead to his cartoons being syndicated to newspapers throughout the continent.

Goldberg changed fields in 1938, moving to the New York Sun as a political cartoonist. It was for his work as a political cartoonist that he won the Pulitzer Prize.

Top Writer From City

Marjory Bancroft, 456 Niagara, won the first prize of $300 in the contest sponsored by Canada Permanent Trausт Company. Ian McCoy, 1158 Finlayson, won second prize of $125.

Miss Bancroft is eligible for the national grand award of $1,000 to be presented to one of the 10 provincial winners. The winner will be announced Monday.

Among the runners-up were five other Vancouver Island students. They are Donald Tait of Wellington, Toni Hepburn of Cowichan Bay, Denise Rollier of 246 Sims, Saanich; Iain Donaldson of Nanaimo, and Nadine Velay of 4436 Tyndall, Saanich.

Robarts—The Chairman of the Board

By R. J. ANDERSON

TORONTO (CP) — The heat under the glaring lights was stifling, nerves on edge, tempers frayed. Voting for the Ontario Progressive Conservative party leadership had been close throughout that long day and evening in dingy Varsity Arena Oct. 25, 1961.

John Parmenter Robarts, the tall, impassive, seemingly confident man from London had been second on the first ballot. He had led, by increasing margins, the next four.

His advance was unspectacular; inexorable.

Robert Macaulay of whom it was said he wanted the leadership so badly he could taste it, controlled himself with obvious effort but was gracious in defeat. After coming last in the fifth ballot, he turned to his strategists beside him and said:

"Go tell our people to vote for Robarts. We don't want Roberts."

A politicial unknown had become leader of Ontario Tories.

Nine years later he still was premier of Ontario, perpetuating Progressive Conservative leadership that has been unbroken for 27 years.

SEEMED IRREPLACEABLE

Leslie Frost, who in 12 years of firm control of the party and the government had earned the sobriquet Old Man Ontario, seemed irreplaceable when he announced his retirement.

John Robarts had represented a London riding for 10 years. He had been on the fringes of the cabinet hierarchy as minister without portfolio. Then as minister of education for three years, he did solid but unspectacular work. But premier?

He spoke seldom and when he did, it was stodgy, uninspiring, follow-the-text, let's-get-it-over-with performances.

Mr. Frost—never "Leslie"—was the Boss, the glad-hander who knew all the politics of local wards, the kindly Old Man Ontario. This new man—he says himself now that he's a "management man"—was different.

As head of the government he has directed the cabinet like a chairman of a board of directors. Ministers were permitted to run their departments on their own—but were dropped quietly when the chairman felt they had failed.

BILL CONTENTIOUS

In 1964, when the Ontario Police Commission called for strong measures to combat criminals, Attorney-General Fred Cass introduced a bill that would have given the commission power to imprison persons who refused to testify before it in secret. There were immediate charges of Ontario becoming a "police state."

The premier withdrew the bill and dropped his attorney-general.

His administration's heavy volume of legislation included a 1966 medical care insurance plan on a voluntary basis, unlike the federal plan of universal care with doctors' services to the needy subsidized. It became compulsory in 1969 and part of the national plan.

Premier Robarts produced few headline-type quotations and at public functions he plodded through his texts without deviation. The image was that of a no-nonsense business-like administrator. Ontario's voters liked it.

In 1969, in one of his rare newspaper interviews, he said the thing to learn as head of a government is "never let it be betrayed that you aren't in control of the situation."

He went on:

"One tries never to become too aware of how much power one has. It is easier to say 'do it' to people, instead of using what I choose to call the ration approach—sitting down and discussing it."

But when a decision was made, it was his.

"I accept the responsibility of making up my own mind, and the blame."

ENJOYS JOB

In the same interview he revealed a facet of his character that the public seldom saw—he thoroughly enjoyed his job and had fun doing it. He said he'd put on a dinner jacket "at the drop of a hat."

"I have a ball. I'll bet I have been in more discotheques than most men my age. And I make it around the bars . . . but not to the topless ones so much. I'm afraid I don't find the women attractive."

He had what he termed the perfect city life. He lived in a midtown hotel and took the five-minute walk to his Queen's Park office before a recurrence of an old football injury to his knee curtailed that activity. He went home to London at weekends to be with his wife Norah, daughter Robin, 16, and son Timothy, 13.

John Robarts was born in Banff, Alta., Jan. 11, 1917. His father was a bank manager. The family moved first to Winnipeg, then to Galt and on to London.

He joined the navy as a rating and ended the war as a lieutenant after service in the Atlantic, Mediterranean and Pacific. He won mention in dispatches for Mediterranean action.

He obtained his law degree from Osgoode Hall in Toronto in 1946. His first political office was as an alderman, in 1951, and in the same year he was elected to the legislature as member for London North.

At 53, what's ahead for John Robarts?

Considered generally as perhaps the most influential, even most powerful, provincial premier in Canada, observers feel he could have any post he wishes in the federal Progressive Conservative party, not excluding the leadership if Robert Stanfield gave it up.

Premier Robarts has indicated strongly in private talks that he seeks nothing more than a return to private life in London.

YOUNGEST DEBATERS ARGUE ABOUT YULE

And so began a debate Thursday night between Andrew and his sister, Sally, 10, before the Oxford Union.

The two, the youngest debators ever to take the floor of the Oxford Union, participated at the suggestion of their father, Eric Parsloe, 32, retiring president of the union.

"I'm very pleased to be here," Andrew said in a shrill voice, "because if I wasn't I would be home in bed."

Grownups invented Christmas, he said, and everything grownup was crackers (crazy), so Christmas must be crackers.

Sally opposed the motion and, turning to her long-haired brother, said: "These long-haired radicals are all the same—what they can't understand is either wrong or a grownup trick."

Parsloe decided the debate was a draw and took the young debaters home to bed.

Wage Guides In U.S. Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arthur Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, says the U.S. government might have to use compulsory arbitration and a wage-price review board to battle inflation.

In the most far-reaching list of anti-inflation proposals by a government official in the Nixon administration, Burns suggested Monday night in Los Angeles changes in minimum wage laws for teenagers and more liberal oil import quotas.

Organized labor immediately attacked his suggestions.

AFL-CIO President George Meany said Burns "wants to roll America back to the 19th century and its economic 'trickle down' theory."

"Dr. Burns' prescription is the wrong medicine for the wrong patient at the wrong time," Meany said.

But while Burns was suggesting a review board, his successor as Nixon's chief economic adviser, Dr. Paul McCracken, rejected wage-and-price guidelines as an effective government policy.

McCracken told business editors meeting in Washington that guidelines in the United States and in other countries have failed to moderate wage increases.

Last Friday, President Nixon announced plans to increase oil production by allowing more Canadian imports to try to roll back a 25-cent-a-barrel increase in crude oil prices, warned business and labor not to bet on future inflation, and called for reform of labor's bargaining in the construction industry.

Burns endorsed Nixon's move as "constructive," but said if inflation continues "numerous other measures might be taken to improve the functioning of our markets."

Compulsory arbitration might be needed in big labor disputes "in industries that vitally involve the public interest," he said.

Thieu Adviser Dies

SAIGON (AP) — Nguyen Cao Thang, 50, a close adviser to President Nguyen Van Thieu, died today on the plane that returned Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky to South Vietnam. He had been suffering from throat cancer.

Ontario's Robarts Vacating His Post

Hard Fight Expected For Powerful Office

TORONTO (CP) — John Robarts announced today he is quitting as Conservative premier of Ontario, saying nine years was long enough in the province's top job and the time had come to open the door to "new approaches."

Mr. Robarts told a news conference he will not contest the next provincial election and will remain in office only until a new party leader and premier is chosen at a leadership convention to be held either in February or March.

The 53-year-old premier gave no indication of his preference for a successor, expressing "complete confidence" in the party to choose a man who would be capable of leading it to victory in elections generally expected next fall.

Commenting on his nine years in office and the unbroken 27-year rule of the Conservatives, he noted that government policies need to be continuously revised and rethought.

Opportunity for New Approach

Then he added that he has never believed any one man or group has a monopoly of ideas and that "it is necessary to provide opportunity for new approaches to be made available."

In a question-and-answer session following his formal statement, Mr. Robarts said he plans to return to private law practice in London, where he has represented the riding of London North for 19 years.

"My name is still on the door," he said.

The premier refused to speculate on the possibility of an election in the next six months but noted the government won't be four years old until next October.

The front-runner is considered to be William Davis, 41, of Brampton, the minister of education. It was from this post that Mr. Robarts launched his own leadership bid to succeed Leslie Frost in 1961.

Mines Minister Allan Lawrence, 45, a Toronto lawyer, had expected to be first into the ring after he announced a news conference for later today. But he later cancelled the news conference.

What Kind of Man Is Robarts?

—Profile on Page 41

Other leading contenders are Darcy McKeough, 37-year-old Chatham businessman and minister of municipal affairs, and Robert Welch, 42, a St. Catharines lawyer who holds the portfolio of provincial secretary.

Also mentioned as potential candidates are Health Minister Thomas Wells, 40, of Toronto; Energy Minister George Kerr, 46, of Burlington; Bert Lawrence, 47, of Ottawa, minister of financial and commercial affairs, and Rene Brunelle, 50, of Moonbeam, minister of lands and forests.

Ontario Leads Fight For Tax Concessions

OTTAWA (CP) — A two-day federal-provincial finance ministers meeting ended today with agreement to meet again in Toronto in February to discuss tax concessions for small business.

That may be the last chance the provinces will have to make their pitch before Finance Minister Edgar Benson makes final decisions on his plans for revising the Income Tax Act, to be presented in a budget next spring.

Charles MacNaughton, Ontario provincial treasurer, presented a plan to today's conference to grant the owner-operators of small Canadian business a healthy tax cut on money they invest or reinvest in their enterprises.

Mr. Benson said the MacNaughton plan is interesting, but contained some difficulties. He did not elaborate.

Ottawa's plan, embodied in Mr. Benson's white paper on proposed tax law revision 18 months ago, is to treat large and small businesses alike from a tax point of view, but offer small business some other form of help.

NEEDS TAX BREAK

Dave Steuart, provincial treasurer of Saskatchewan, described the MacNaughton proposal as a tax deferral plan and said Saskatchewan thinks the small businessman—including the farmer—should have a tax break as well as a tax deferral.

The final session of the conference also looked briefly at the federal government's new white paper on social security, but put off detailed discussion until provincial welfare ministers have examined it more fully.

Raymond Garneau, recently appointed finance minister of Quebec, said the social security white paper, the federal government's white paper on unemployment insurance, and two studies nearing completion in Quebec on social security, now should form the basis of a general revision of the whole system. Quebec wants to take over more welfare schemes as a provincial respinsibility.

The Ontario plan for tax concessions to small Canadian business would be to allow a 50-per cent credit against income taxes otherwise payable for any investment, up to $10,000 a year, that a person makes in his own business, whether individually owned or a partnership.

MORE ENCOURAGING

This, Mr. MacNaughton said, would be a greater encouragement for small business than the current federal tax law which imposes a lower rate of taxes on the first $35,000 of business profits.

The Ontario plan was tabled at the conference when it resumed its two-day session, dealing today with the federal white paper proposals for revision of the Income Tax Act.

The federal plan would do away with the 21-per-cent tax rate on the first $35,000 of company profits, and tax all company profits at about 50 per cent. Ottawa has promised to introduce some other small business.

Mr. MacNaughton's plan would be limited to individuals who put money into their own small businesses in Canada. The maximum credit that could be claimed any year would be $10,000, and over the lifetime of the individual, $100,000. Investments in property, portfolio securities, and mining, gas and oil speculations would not qualify.

NO CHRISTMAS UNTIL CANE CUT

HAVANA (Reuter) — Christmas in Cuba will be postponed until July, Prime Minister Fidel Castro said Monday night.

In a 3½-hour radio and television speech, Castro said that the holiday season, like last year, was being postponed so that the sugar cane harvest would not be delayed.

He said that the best time to harvest the sugar cane crop was from November to May.

TRUDEAU EXPANDS CABINET

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau today gave notice of legislation to expand his cabinet through creation of several new portfolios.

New departments will include an environment ministry which would take over some of the responsibilities of the resources department, a postmaster-general's department separate from the present communications ministry and a ministry of state for housing and urban affairs.

Wage Guides In U.S. Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arthur Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, says the U.S. government might have to use compulsory arbitration and a wage-price review board to battle inflation.

In the most far-reaching list of anti-inflation proposals by a government official in the Nixon administration, Burns suggested Monday night in Los Angeles changes in minimum wage laws for teenagers and more liberal oil import quotas.

Organized labor immediately attacked his suggestions.

AFL-CIO President George Meany said Burns "wants to roll America back to the 19th century and its economic 'trickle down' theory."

"Dr. Burns' prescription is the wrong medicine for the wrong patient at the wrong time," Meany said.

But while Burns was suggesting a review board, his successor as Nixon's chief economic adviser, Dr. Paul McCracken, rejected wage-and-price guidelines as an effective government policy.

McCracken told business editors meeting in Washington that guidelines in the United States and in other countries have failed to moderate wage increases.

SUPPORTS NIXON

Last Friday, President Nixon announced plans to increase oil production by allowing more Canadian imports to try to roll back a 25-cent-a-barrel increase in crude oil prices, warned business and labor not to bet on future inflation, and called for reform of labor's bargaining in the construction industry.

Burns endorsed Nixon's move as "constructive," but said if inflation continues "numerous other measures might be taken to improve the functioning of our markets."

Compulsory arbitration might be needed in big labor disputes "in industries that vitally involve the public interest," he said.

FAMILY DIES IN CABLECAR

MERANO, Italy (AP) — A runaway cablecar plunged down a mountainside in the Alpine foothills today, carrying five members of a family to their death.

The victims — two men, two women and a child — were riding the privately-operated cable lift up from the Alto Adige village of Postal to a farm on the mountainside.

The brakes failed when the car reached the top of the line and the car plunged back down, crashing into a pylon at the starting station.

Wounded Lie Bleeding

PHNOM PENH (Reuter) — About 200 wounded Cambodian soldiers are lying bleeding at the scene of fierce fighting northeast of here because no helicopters are available to rescue them, military sources said today.

Field reports that a Cambodian battalion, besieged by North Vietnamese at the Mekong River position of Peam Chikang, had suffered major casualties circulated in the capital. Military spokesmen said they were still out or radio contact with the government force.

After Canada, What? Cross to Decide Next Post

LONDON (CP) — James Jasper Cross discussed his future with foreign office officials today but gave no indication where his next posting will be.

Accompanied by his wife, the British diplomat drove into London from his countryside retreat to confer with Oliver Wright, chief personnel officer in the foreign office.

The couple had been spending the weekend at Dorneywood, official country residence of Sir Alec Douglas-Home, the foreign secretary.

Cross appeared to be recovering from his 60-day terrorist ordeal. He smiled and posed for photographers as he entered the government building for his first appointment since his arrival from Montreal Saturday night. But he declined to make any statement.

The foreign office said he planned to make a full statement at a press conference Wednesday afternoon.

Watchdog Body Asked On Car Insurance Hikes

By BRUCE YEMEN

The Social Credit chairman of the legislative committee on automobile insurance today urged the government to set up a special board to police insurance rates.

Herb Capozzi (SC—Vancouver Centre) issued the call following reports that B.C. insurance rates may rise even higher than the increase across Canada expected next year.

Estimates for the expected increase have ranged around 12 per cent or more, following a similar increase earlier this year.

Capozzi, in a telephone interview from Vancouver, said the legislative insurance committee during the last legislative session urged that the automobile insurance board be established to rule on rates and to study whether the sale of car insurance should be entirely in the hands of the industry.

The board could be established by cabinet order because the government's 1969 car insurance legislation contains provision for such an authority.

Anti-U.S. Rioting Rages in S. Viet City

QUI NHON, Vietnam (AP) — Anti-American rioting raged Monday and today in this central coastal city following the fatal shooting of a South Vietnamese high school student by an American soldier.

A 24-hour curfew was ordered but demonstrations, window-smashing and the burning of U.S. military vehicles continued. Some American troops were injured by flying rocks, informants said.

Qui Nhon was placed off limits to all Americans.

Informed U.S. sources said the demonstrators, estimated at between 2,500 and 4,000, demanded that the American soldier who killed the youth be turned over to South Vietnamese authorities for immediate trial.

The soldier was not identified. He was in custody, and military officials were investigating the shooting.

Informed sources said the student was killed Monday afternoon when a group of Vietnamese youths climbed aboard an American Army truck carrying boxes of C-rations and tried to steal some of them.

A soldier in the truck fired a warning shot, the sources said. It killed a high school student standing nearby who was not involved in the looting attempt.

Several students paraded the dead boy's body through the streets, chanting "Yankee Go Home" and attracting followers as they marched. School children began hurling rocks at U.S. soldiers, smashing the windows of American Jeeps and burning vehicles.

REPORT RECOMMENDS PAMPHLET WITH PILLS

OTTAWA (CP) — Each time a woman buys birth control pills she should also get a pamphlet warning her of signs of potential trouble and emphasizing the need for continuing supervision by her doctor.

This is the recommendation to the government by a committee of medical specialists in a report tabled in the Commons today.

Merge Now Or Pay For It

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

If an order from the provincial government is the only way to get Greater Victoria municipalities to amalgamate, that order should be given now.

This is the view of Victoria Alderman Clyde Savage who believes the present system of separate municipalities under a "vague" regional government is only creating more and more parochialism.

No form of real amalgamation ever takes place without the provincial minister of municipal affairs saying it must, Savage says.

Having sat as an alternate member of the capital regional board for the last year, he believes any accomplishments by the region to date have been made only in spite of "impossible political influence."

A regional government would not be suited to govern the whole area, he says.

"It is my view that urban government and rural government are two entirely different forms of government and must of necessity be (handled) by totally different methods."

The answer, says Savage, is some form of metro government for the urban area comprised of Victoria, Oak Bay, part of Saanich and Esquimalt, with the regional government in charge of all rural areas as well as matters that effect both areas crucially.

Furthermore, the new arrangement must be "so set up that complete co-operation between them must result.

"The minister, the capital regional district and the elected officials of municipal governments will probably respond that this is what is happening, and there is evidence that some progress has been made in this direction. But I maintain that time is of the essence, and the public cannot afford the slow buggy ride which they are getting."

At present, Savage says, the terms of reference for the regional government are "incomplete, vague and entirely without authority, and create parochial government at its worst. . . ."

With a growing regional government bureaucracy there should be "some decrease in costs of local government. However, this is not the case as costs are also increasing at the municipal level. I can see no reason for two areas of government not co-operating to consolidate these costs.

"It is my contention that the public, who pays for these costs, is being taken down the garden path with spiralling costs unparalleled in local government."

Savage points to a recent Victoria initiative to get the region and the province to come together and study transportation needs for the whole area.

The result was that the city was "told we were moving in isolation, and that the capital regional district had already moved ahead in this field. There can be no progress unless all parties concerned work together."

Another situation that illustrates the problem: "I contend that the hospital situation is intolerable to our society, and would not be in this condition if the capital regional district had the authority to make a decision without outside influences interfering."

The provincial government, he says, is following a course which lets "the chips fall as they may, hoping in due course that problems will be solved, but in my mind the time has come for more concrete plans and action.

"The several municipalities are not going to agree to any amalgamation of services, which is quite evident from the remarks and discussions of the various councils," he says.

"It is time that the provincial government shows some leadership in setting up a workable combination of regional and municipal government that can plan the future for this area."

Chief Refuses To Close Down 'Unsound Hall'

Saanich Fire Chief Joseph Sutherland said today his department has "no intention" of taking action to close a community hall in Gordon Head "unless someone can show me it's necessary."

He made the comment after the municipal building department recommended to council that the Gordon Head Mutual Improvement Society hall, Tyndall Avenue, be demolished on the grounds it is unsafe.

A section of the Fire Marshal Act provides for inspection and, if a fire would endanger life or property, ordering destruction or repair of the building.

Concern expressed by the building department was about structural aspects and fear of collapse. A dance is scheduled for New Year's Eve, after which the hall is to be closed with a new municipal facility opening nearby in late January.

'NOT TOO UNHAPPY'

Sutherland said his department looked at the hall in the summer and "it didn't look too bad." There was concern about a rear exit but because the hall was due to come to an end anyway, "we said if they put an exit sign at the rear and a couple of extinguishers we were not too unhappy."

He described the furnace room as "one of the best of community halls in the lower Island. From a fire safety standpoint, we are not too concerned."

He also said there are time delays even if the fire department takes action. First, a notice is issued and then there are 10 days to appeal to the fire marshal who has to come from Vancouver to make an inspection and then it can go to court. He didn't know if activites at the hall would have to cease "until all this is over."

Council has tabled the issue for viewing, a step in the demolition procedure. Even if demolition is ordered, there is a 30-day notice period.

A report by Joseph Barber-Starkey, municipal development engineer, said a letter was sent to the society recommending group activities be discontined because of the "unsound" state of the hall. While a date could not be foretold for a structural failure, it is a hazard and demolition was recommended.

The hall was viewed by officials of the building and

SUTHERLAND
. . . no fire threat

Society president Jack Groves told council that other than a fire marshal's inspection, after which action was taken, the group had received no notice the building was in bad shape.

'TALKED OUT OF IT'

He said all activities have been cancelled except a dog obedience class and a New Year's Eve dance. After the beginning of the year it was planned to voluntarily close the hall.

The new Gordon Head swimming pool and community centre on the Lambrick Estate, not far away, is to open Jan. 23.

Ald. William Noel disagreed with the finding that the building is unsound and wanted to know more. Ald. Alan Newberry asked why action wasn't taken by municipal officials before now.

Starkey said the fire chief was going to take action several months ago "but was talked out of it pending construction of the new hall."

Mayor Hugh Curtis said he is not prepared to "carry on my conscience" a possible tragedy at the planned dance.

A society member, W. E. Beck, told council he objects "strongly and question the qualifications" of those who made the inspection and asked if they were structural engineers.

'IT WILL BREAK'

Starkey, himself an engineer, said it was a practical job that a contractor or heavy timber carpenter could do. He also referred to a report last April which recommended the premises be demolished.

Ald. William Campbell, a general contractor, said the next move the building makes "it will break. It is simple to fix up with a few tie rods, very inexpensive, so it couldn't collapse. The building is in terrible shape."

But a reading to council of the file on the subject included a comment that the hall is past the stage where remedial work is possible.

Both Curtis and Ald. Edith Gunning urged that "something more" be done than simply table for viewing. Others said this is the necessary legal step before demolition.

Ald. Leslie Passmore said "the fact that it will get this much publicity is a clear indication it will close tomorrow."

COLLEGE'S FIRST BUDGET $100,000 OVER

Council Member Resigns in Protest

Failure to keep Juan de Fuca College's first budget within boundaries promised ratepayers in September has prompted the resignation of a college councilman.

Dr. Victor Rogers, a Greater Victoria school trustee as well as a councilman, quit Monday night because the budget was nearly $100,000 higher than promised taxpayers when they approved the proposal to replace the present Institute of Adult Studies.

Greater Victoria school district ratepayers voted Oct. 10 and were told the cost of operating the college would be about $250,000 or about six-tenths of a mill.

The Oct. 10 vote, however, was a non-money vote.

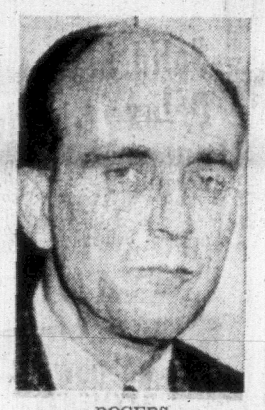
The budget approved Monday by the council set the local share of running the college at $286,709 for the 12 months from April 1, 1971, to March 31, 1972.

The council also set the fees at $200 annually.

The figure of $250 for fees was discussed by the council but turned down. The increased fee structure would have dropped the local cost figure to $241,559 or under the $250,000 estimate.

But the council was faced with two factors that complicated the budgetary picture.

The first was the $62,403 operating cost of the present Institute of Adult Studies from Jan. 1, 1971, to June 30, 1971, and the second was a recent provincial government switch putting college budgets on a fiscal-year basis rather than a calendar-year basis.



ROGERS

This second point means the council had to write a 15-month budget from Jan. 1, 1971, to March 31, 1972, to cover the operation of the institute and the college.

(If the council had only to budget for 1971 for the operation of both the institute and college cost would have been $242,732 to be paid by local ratepayers. This would be .639 mills or very close to the six-mill figure officials estimated the college would cost earlier in the fall.)

The 15-month budget, however, will cost the taxpayer $349,112 or .9.9 mills.

Rogers said today the council wasn't being honest by allowing the college budget to overrun estimates promised the electorate for the Oct. 10 plebiscite.

He added that if the council had agreed to the student fee of $250 a year instead of the $200 figure agreed to this would have been an attempt to keep the cost within the estimates.

Rogers and fellow councilman Allan McKinnon voted against the budget approval and the $200 fee motions.

Councillors were told they could not act on Rogers' resignation as he had been appointed by the provincial government.

'Hefty Blow' Fractures Man's Skull

A 22-year-old sailor who fractured another man's skull with a drunken punch Oct. 30 was fined $200 today when he pleaded guilty to assault causing bodily harm before Judge William Ostler.

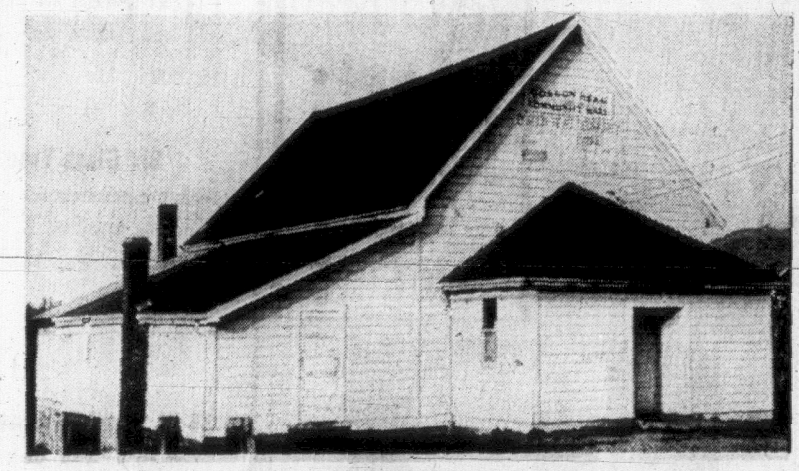
Roderick Cupp, of CFB Esquimalt was entering Tillicum Club premises at 645 Johnson when he got into a scuffle with a man who had been blocking the doorway, court was told.

Both were intoxicated, police said, but when Cupp lashed out with a punch that struck the other man above the temple, the man collapsed unconscious.

Hospital treatment subsequently revealed a depressed skull fracture that required surgery and the insertion of a metal plate.

Ostler asked Cupp if he was a professional prize fighter and when the man said no the judge commented on the punch being "a pretty hefty blow."

The judge said his sentence was lenient because there was no evidence that Cupp intended to seriously harm his opponent.



Will a New Year's Dance Bring Its Walls Down?

City Hall Prods Hydro

Victoria city council decided today to prod B.C. Hydro and the Capital Regional District for information and policy on underground power transmission.

The move comes following a letter from the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission which asks what action occurred when the commission asked for a technical study on underground transmission.

Mayor Courtney Haddock told council's B Committee that a year ago a B.C. Hydro official "promised" some action but nothing has been received.

The city will write to both B.C. Hydro and the region for a progress report.

DRIVERS STAY ON OVERTIME

Bus Hours to Remain As Is

Victoria bus drivers will not follow the lead of Vancouver drivers in refusing to work overtime, a B.C. Hydro spokesman said today.

It was reported from Vancouver the overtime cutback will force many residents, particularly University of B.C. students, to seek other means of transportation.

H. R. Halls, Victoria transportation manager, said "voluntary overtime" was involved.

"There's always a certain amount of overtime during the rush hour, and the drivers volunteer to take it," Halls said.

Bus drivers and mechanics, members of the Amalgamated Transit Union, are involved in contract negotiations with Hydro and recently served 72-hour strike notice.

The former contract expired Oct. 31, and under its terms drivers earned $3.75 an hour and mechanics $4.35.

The Victoria local has about 200 members. A spokesman for the union could not be reached today.

Hooson Named Manager

HOOSON
. . . unanimous choice

Assistant city manager William Hooson was named by Victoria city council Monday to succeed Dennis Young as city manager.

Hooson, 49, was appointed assistant in 1964 and before that was city welfare administrator.

He will begin duties as manager Feb. 1 when Young moves to the Capital Regional District government office as executive director. Young's appointment was made Nov. 27.

Hooson's appointment was made following an in-camera council meeting Monday afternoon. It was announced the vote was unanimous.

Salary is $22,000, rising to $23,000 after one year.

Hooson said following his appointment he is "very pleased that council gave me this vote of confidence."

Arthur Mayse . . .

JUST OVER A WEEK AGO I told you about 230 elementary-grade children whose school library consisted of books in two distinct categories.

There were the volumes bought from their own salaries by staff members. The others, which is to say about half, were so old and so worn by generations of young readers that they should have been retired long since.

Today, thanks to the generosity of Victorians who feel that children who want to read should be given the chance, the South Park school library situation is changing for the better.

For the past week, I've been sharing my desk space with books, books, books. They arrived in bags and cartons and neatly-corded bundles.

So far, acting for the donors, I've passed close to 200 titles on to South Park. They're being catalogued now, as welcome additions to the library.

And one thing sure: they will not lack eager readers.

But occasionally he runs into something that he doesn't pretend to understand.

More than once he has wondered whether the great carnivores that he photographs at ranges as close as 17 feet are possessed of an extra sense.

As he explained last week when he brought his very fine color film, Grizzly Country, to Victoria, he had no luck in shooting grizzly footage during his first attempts.

He and his two sons toiled long and hard to get the big bears in their lenses. Each time, though, their camera quarry lost no time in removing itself from the scene.

"That year," Andy explained, "we'd taken rifles along as a precaution. All we got on film was a succession of grizzly backsides. When we moved in, the bears moved out."

Furthermore, the grizzlies continued to spook even when the Russells decided to leave their firearms in camp.

Next year they took no rifles, and got any number of bear sequences.

"I can't account for it," Andy said, "but they seemed to know we were harmless."

His question:

Is it possible that some animals are gifted with what man has labelled extra-sensory perception?

Saturday will be municipal elections day, and wherever two or three are gathered together, the candidates for office are making their pitches. Many are veterans of civic administration who know the ropes. They're also aware that a place on council or board can have its little drawbacks.

For the benefit of untried candidates who have yet to test the heat in the municipal kitchen, it wouldn't hurt to list a few of these.

There are the meetings. There are the committee meetings. There is the discovery that much of any municipality's essential business is complex, time-taking, and deadly dull.

There is also the budget, which is unfailingly so large that it provokes squeals of dismay from the taxpayers, and so small that it can't possibly accomplish even half of what needs doing in any year.

The successful candidate needn't expect, either, that the voters who inscribed their Xs after his name have full confidence in his abilities. Let him fail to please, and they will be among his loudest critics. They may even give him a worse time than those who didn't support him.

He can expect to be damned if he does and damned if he doesn't, and let me be the first to wish him luck. As your rep and mine, he's going to need it!

Minor Baseball Loops Aim at Canadian Image

Connie Mack baseball may have gone by the boards in favor of a more distinctive Canadian program.

A weekend meeting in Vancouver of all former Connie Mack leagues throughout the province approved the move "toward total Canadian participation" and a change of name to the "British Columbia Juvenile Baseball Association."

Bill Daniels of Victoria was named president of the division, which will operate under the wing of the B.C. and Canadian Federation of Amateur Baseball.

"We were reluctant to change," said Daniels, "Because many of us were diehard Connie Mack supporters. by the same token, however, there was no justice in continuing with a United States-oriented program because of the expenses involved."

BISONS AND BEAVERS

The league for under-18 players is expected to work towards a Canadian final eventually, but the Western Canada championships "will be the end of the playoff line" in 1971, he added.

B.C.'s Connie Mack program contributed 52 players to U.S. colleges in the Pacific Northwest through scholarships, said Daniels, and he expects the new program to be better.

In Winnipeg, an official of the CFAB said the 18-year-old division will be categorized "Bison." Ron Hayter of Edmonton, CFAB vice-president, also said "beaver" will be the name adopted for a division covering 11-13 year-olds and "Mosquito" will designate the 9-11 category.

CANADIAN RULEBOOK

Hayter also said a distinctively Canadian rulebook has been approved and will be ready for national distribution in April.

He said the new rules will bring uniformity to Canadian baseball. "It is one of the most significant steps for amateur baseball in Canada."

The sport's development has been hampered by rules "and a hodge-podge of confusing regulations."

It is not known what effect the new rules will have on Pony and Baby Ruth Leagues. The associations are governed by the B.C. Minor Baseball Association.

OUT OF ACTION for about one month will be Roy Edwards, No. 1 goalie for Detroit Red Wings. Edwards, 33, suffered hairline skull fracture Sunday when he hit ice while making save in National Hockey League game, won 4-2 by St. Louis Blues.

Barclay Gets Cycle Award

Presentation of the Memorial Trophy to Barclay highlighted the club's 36th annual banquet and awards presentation. Harold Perepalkin was runner-up.

The activity award for overall contribution to club affairs went to Mr. and Mrs. Jack Batey, while Comp Kelly won the Matson Award for his contribution to the sport.

Dentures Over 2 Years Old?

Dentures—especially older dentures—are harder to keep clean than natural teeth. And hard brushing with abrasive pastes or powders may damage or scratch.

That's why so many dentists now recommend soaking your dentures clean in easy-to-use KLEENITE.

KLEENITE has a 2-way formula—(1) detergent; (2) activated oxygen; (3) solvent—that surges to tiny crevices; penetrates where no brush can reach; helps soak away film and stain. The dingier the dentures, the more spectacular the results . . . with KLEENITE Denture Cleanser!

Why Vote?

Anthony Miller would be a good alderman. What made him run for office?

At a recent public hearing on a rezoning of a waterfront property in the City of Victoria, from single family residential to an apartment-office-restaurant complex, the mayor terminated the hearing by refusing to hear any further speakers. Judgement was made in favour of the developer. Those opposed: The residents of the entire neighbourhood. Those in favour: The developer, the mayor and a majority of the City Council.

Although the council do not deny this abuse of the law, their attitude is you spend your money taking us to court then we'll spend your money fighting you . . . complaint received and filed.

That same day, the residents of the area around Spencer Castle found that the mayor attempted to cut short their debate. As they had retained a solicitor, the end result was successful to the property owners.

There is no time limit between application for rezoning of any property, thus the City Council will simply hammer rezonings at these people until they crumble . . .

It's Here! Now read George Orwell's 1984 — If you like it, DON'T VOTE — sit back and wait.

Look at the back cover of your new telephone book.

If you would like this for Victoria, DON'T VOTE — it will come.

If you support municipal borrowing at present astronomical interest rates, DON'T VOTE . . . let our taxes rise.

If you don't care about older folks struggling on fixed incomes trying to live respectably — DON'T VOTE — they're strangers anyway.

If you like schemes to turn Victoria into a Los Angeles traffic spree — Stay home on December 12: It is being arranged.

If you feel that older areas of the city should be encouraged to spruce up with municipal help, I'm glad.

I vote because I care. I like Victoria. I like the sea and the breezes. I like sunshine, trees, and birds singing.

I need the help of people who care about more than their own selfish problems.

Victoria can be destroyed. Please don't help kill it . . .

Please come and vote: it's free . . . On Saturday . . . Miller would be very grateful.

Merry Christmas.

Inserted by Anthony Miller for Alderman.

Hooks Drop as Winds Fail

Humphrey Golby, one of Oak Bay's aldermanic candidates, took time off from electioneering Saturday to sail three frostbite races at Cadboro Bay and win himself top honors in Davidson dinghy competition.

Finishing second and third in the 13-boat fleet were Ted Bowers and Doug Kidd.

There were also 13 El Toros out for the Royal Vic. racing. Jim Williams was the big winner. Behind him came Marion Brown and John Hall.

Bruce Smith and Doug Taylor Lee tied for first place in Fireball competition, Bill Van Cuylenborg won in X class and Andrew Burton was the top Sabot sailor.

Royal Vic. keel boat skippers were forced to call it a day Sunday when lack of wind to fight a strong ebb tide stalled their boats in a 10-mile race off Sidney.

It wasn't exactly a lost cause. Several of the boats, waiting for the wind that never came, dropped the hook off Sidney Spit and, in spite of the rain, indulged in off-season picnics!

The situation was in reverse Saturday when several boats that compete in the Canoe Bay Siling Club's races off Sidney, expecting winds to build up to gale force, decided to stay dockside.

The 10 boats that remained competed in sou-westerlies that ranged between 12 and 15 knots with Bent Jespersen's Limfjord becoming the winner.

Robarts—The Chairman of the Board

By B. J. ANDERSON

TORONTO (CP) — The heat under the glaring lights was stifling, nerves on edge, tempers frayed. Voting for the Ontario Progressive Conservative party leadership had been close throughout that long day and evening in dingy Varsity Arena Oct. 25, 1961.

John Parmenter Robarts, the tall, impassive, seemingly confident man from London had been second on the first ballot. He had led, by increasing margins, the next four.

His advance was unspectacular; inexorable.

Robert Macaulay of whom it was said he wanted the leadership so badly he could taste it, controlled himself with obvious effort but was gracious in defeat. After coming last in the fifth ballot, he turned to his strategists beside him and said:

"Go tell our people to vote for Robarts. We don't want Roberts."

A politicial unknown had become leader of Ontario Tories.

Nine years later he still was premier of Ontario, perpetuating Progressive Conservative leadership that has been unbroken for 27 years.

SEEMED IRREPLACEABLE

Leslie Frost, who in 12 years of firm control of the party and the government had earned the sobriquet Old Man Ontario, seemed irreplaceable when he announced his retirement.

John Robarts had represented a London riding for 10 years. He had been on the fringes of the cabinet hierarchy as minister without portfolio. Then as minister of education for three years, he did solid but unspectacular work. But premier?

He spoke seldom and when he did, it was stodgy, uninspiring, follow-the-text; let's-get-it-over-with performances.

Mr. Frost—never "Leslie"—was the Boss, the glad-hander who knew all the politics of local wards, the kindly Old Man Ontario. This new man—he says himself now that he's a "management man"—was different.

As head of the government he has directed the cabinet like a chairman of a board of directors. Ministers were permitted to run their departments on their own—but were dropped quietly when the chairman felt they had failed.

BILL CONTENTIOUS

In 1964, when the Ontario Police Commission called for strong measures to combat criminals, Attorney-General Fred Cass introduced a bill that would have given the commission power to imprison persons who refused to testify before it in secret. There were immediate charges of Ontario becoming a "police state."

His administration's heavy volume of legislation included a 1966 medical care insurance plan on a voluntary basis, unlike the federal plan of universal care with doctors' services to the needy subsidized. It became compulsory in 1969 and part of the national plan.

Premier Robarts, produced few headline-type quotations and at public functions he plodded through his texts without deviation. The image was that of a no-nonsense business-like administrator. Ontario's voters liked it.

In 1969, in one of his rare newspaper interviews, he said the thing to learn as head of a government is "never let it be betrayed that you aren't in control of the situation."

He went on:

"One tries never to become too aware of how much power one has. It is easier to say 'do it' to people, instead of using what I choose to call the ration approach—sitting down and discussing it."

But when a decision was made, it was his.

"I accept the responsibility of making up my own mind, and the blame."

ENJOYS JOB

In the same interview he revealed a facet of his character that the public seldom saw—he thoroughly enjoyed his job and had fun doing it. He said he'd put on a dinner jacket "at the drop of a hat."

"I have a ball. I'll bet I have been in more discotheques than most men my age. And I make it around the bars . . . but not to the topless ones so much. I'm afraid I don't find the women attractive."

He had what he termed the perfect city life. He lived in a midtown hotel and took the five-minute walk to his Queen's Park office before a recurrence of an old football injury to his knee curtailed that activity. He went home to London at weekends to be with his wife Norah, daughter Robin, 16, and son Timothy, 13.

John Robarts was born in Banff, Alta., Jan. 11, 1917. His father was a bank manager. The family moved first to Winnipeg, then to Galt and on to London.

He joined the navy as a rating and ended the war as a lieutenant after service in the Atlantic, Mediterranean and Pacific. He won mention in dispatches for Mediterranean action.

He obtained his law degree from Osgoode Hall in Toronto in 1946. His first political office was as an alderman, in 1951, and in the same year he was elected to the legislature as member for London North.

At 53, what's ahead for John Robarts?

Considered generally as perhaps the most influential, even most powerful, provincial premier in Canada, observers feel he could have any post he wishes in the federal Progressive Conservative party, not excluding the leadership if Robert Stanfield gave it up.

Premier Robarts has indicated strongly in private talks that he seeks nothing more than a return to private life in London.

YOUNGEST DEBATERS ARGUE ABOUT YULE

And so began a debate Thursday night between Andrew and his sister, Sally, 10, before the Oxford Union.

The two, the youngest debaters ever to take the floor of the Oxford Union, participated at the suggestion of their father, Eric Parsloe, 32, retiring president of the union.

"I'm very pleased to be here," Andrew said in a shrill voice, "because if I wasn't I would be home in bed."

Grownups invented Christmas, he said, and everything grownup was crackers (crazy), so Christmas must be crackers.

Sally opposed the motion and, turning to her long-haired brother, said: "These long-haired radicals are all the same—what they can't understand is either wrong or a grownup trick."

Parsloe decided the debate was a draw and took the young debaters home to bed.

Bonn Leads Partners Closer to E. Germany

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON

BRUSSELS (AP) — A Big Four deal eliminating divided Berlin as a source of East-West conflict could open the way for general Western recognition of Communist East Germany, NATO diplomats reported here.

This is a new element in the attitude of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Never before have NATO members been prepared to talk about an acknowledgement of East Germany's sovereignty or its entry, alongside West Germany, into the United Nations.

The shift in NATO's position is a direct result of the efforts of Chancellor Willy Brandt's coalition government to normalize West Germany's relations with its Eastern community neighbors.

It was only implied, not stated, when NATO leaders wound up four days of talks with a declaration Friday making a Berlin settlement their price for joining the Communist nations in a search for a new European security system. But they did state that a Berlin solution would enable the West and East German governments to reach "... an understanding ... on a negotiated settlement of their mutual relations which would take account of the special features of the situation in Germany."

LOOK TO ULBRICHT

It seems clear that if such a "negotiated settlement" with President Walter Ulbricht's East German government proves good enough for the West Germans it will be good enough for other NATO countries.

There have, in the view of senior NATO officials, been other far-reaching implications for the West in Brandt's Eastern policy.

Among these implications:

—Ulbricht seems to have become odd man out within the seven-nation Warsaw alliance, as the major block to Russia's apparent readiness for compromise on Berlin. Russia last month accepted and then, after East German intervention, backed away from a new Western plan for tackling the Berlin problem.

—Brandt's still-unratified non-aggression pact with the Soviet Union has provided a new impetus for attempts by Britain and three other countries to join the European Common Market. Some authorities in France, for example, feel Britain's entry into the market would serve to counter dangers that may arise if the West Germans pursue their Eastern policies too far or too fast.

Informants reported there already is firm evidence of closer French-British political understanding on some major world issues in Germany and the Middle East. They disclosed details of one significant incident:

When Brandt was negotiating with Poland for a treaty normalizing relations, a treaty due to be signed Monday, the Oder-Neisse frontier was always the major issue. This river line, since the Second World War, has served as Poland's western frontier.

Brandt wanted a clause spelling out that this frontier was only provisional and could only be finally confirmed in an ultimate all-German peace settlement.

Poland refused.

The West Germans then consulted the Americans, British and French who, with the Russians, retain responsibility for a German treaty.

The informants said the United States backed Brandt's position. But the British and French, they said, did not. Their advice was not to insist because that would antagonize the Poles and jeopardize the treaty.

BRANDT GAVE IN

Brandt bowed to the British-French view.

He did set forth his reservations in a letter outside the framework of the treaty. The Poles merely took note of them. As a result they are considered weaker than if they had been included in the pact itself.

If and when a Berlin solution is reached, opening the way to a wider East-West German agreement, it will not mean a general NATO rush to recognize the Ulbricht government. It will mean merely that any NATO states which choose to do so will no longer be constrained by the need to preserve a solid NATO front.

Though Ulbricht and his government have long been unpopular in both East and West, they have at least one high pair in the international poker game:

1. Their consent to a settlement with West Germany would considerably ease tensions in central Europe, the area long considered the most dangerous to the peace of the Continent.

2. East Germany has a flourishing economy with which many countries, including Western ones, are eager to develop more trade relations.

Ontario's Robarts Vacating His Post

Hard Fight Expected For Powerful Office

TORONTO (CP) — John Robarts announced today he is quitting as Conservative premier of Ontario, saying nine years was long enough in the province's top job and the time had come to open the door to "new approaches."

Mr. Robarts told a news conference he will not contest the next provincial election and will remain in office only until a new party leader and premier is chosen at a leadership convention to be held either in February or March.

The 53-year-old premier gave no indication of his preference for a successor, expressing "complete confidence" in the party to choose a man who would be capable of leading it to victory in elections generally expected next fall.

Commenting on his nine years in office and the unbroken 27-year rule of the Conservatives, he noted that government policies need to be continuously revised and rethought.

Opportunity for New Approach

Then he added that he has never believed any one man or group has a monopoly of ideas and that "it is necessary to provide opportunity for new approaches to be made available."

In a question-and-answer session following his formal statement, Mr. Robarts said he plans to return to private law practice in London, where he has represented the riding of London North for 19 years.

"My name is still on the door," he said.

The premier refused to speculate on the possibility of an election in the next six months but noted the government won't be four years old until next October.

The front-runner is considered to be William Davis, 41, of Brampton, the minister of education. It was from this post that Mr. Robarts launched his own leadership bid to succeed Leslie Frost in 1961.

Mines Minister Allan Lawrence, 45, a Toronto lawyer, had expected to be first into the ring after he announced a news conference for later today. But he later cancelled the news conference.

What Kind of Man Is Robarts?

Other leading contenders are Darcy McKeough, 37-year-old Chatham businessman and minister of municipal affairs, and Robert Welch, 42, a St. Catharines lawyer who holds the portfolio of provincial secretary.

Also mentioned as potential candidates are Health Minister Thomas, Wells, 40, of Toronto; Energy Minister George Kerr, 46, of Burlington; Bert Lawrence, 47, of Ottawa, minister of financial and commercial affairs, and Rene Brunelle, 50, of Moonbeam, minister of lands and forests.

ROBARTS . . . a return to private life

Ontario Leads Fight For Tax Concessions

OTTAWA (CP) — A two-day federal-provincial finance ministers meeting ended today with agreement to meet again in Toronto in February to discuss tax concessions for small business.

That may be the last chance the provinces will have to make their pitch before Finance Minister Edgar Benson makes final decisions on his plans for revising the Income Tax Act, to be presented in a budget next spring.

Charles MacNaughton, Ontario provincial treasurer, presented a plan to today's conference to grant the owner-operators of small Canadian business a healthy tax cut on money they invest or reinvest in their enterprises.

Mr. Benson said the MacNaughton plan is interesting, but contained some difficulties. He did not elaborate.

Ottawa's plan, embodied in Mr. Benson's white paper on proposed tax law revision 13 months ago, is to treat large and small businesses alike from a tax point of view, but offer small business some other form of help.

NEEDS TAX BREAK

Dave Steuart, provincial treasurer of Saskatchewan, described the MacNaughton proposal as a tax deferral plan and said Saskatchewan thinks the small businessman—including the farmer—should have a tax break as well as a tax deferral.

The final session of the conference also looked briefly at the federal government's new white paper on social security, but put off detailed discussion until provincial welfare ministers have examined it more fully.

Raymond Garneau, recently appointed finance minister of Quebec, said the social security white paper, the federal government's white paper on unemployment insurance, and two studies nearing completion in Quebec on social security, now should form the basis of a general revision of the whole system. Quebec wants to take over more welfare schemes as a provincial respinsibility.

The Ontario plan for tax concessions to small Canadian business would be to allow a 50-per cent credit against income taxes otherwise payable for any investment, up to $10,000 a year, that a person makes in his own business, whether individually owned or a partnership.

MORE ENCOURAGING

This, Mr. MacNaughton said, would be a greater encouragement for small business than the current federal tax law which imposes a lower rate of taxes on the first $35,000 of business profits.

The Ontario plan was tabled at the conference when it resumed its two-day session, dealing today with the federal white paper proposals for revision of the Income Tax Act.

The federal plan would do away with the 21-per-cent tax rate on the first $35,000 of company profits, and tax all company profits at about 50 per cent. Ottawa has promised to introduce some other small business.

Mr. MacNaughton's plan would be limited to individuals who put money into their own small businesses in Canada. The maximum credit that could be claimed any year would be $10,000, and over the lifetime of the individual, $100,000. Investments in property, portfolio securities, and mining, gas and oil speculations would not qualify.

TRUDEAU EXPANDS CABINET

Times News Services

New departments will include an environment ministry which would take over some of the responsibilities of the resources department, a postmaster-general's department separate from the present communications ministry and a ministry of state for housing and urban affairs.

NO CHRISTMAS UNTIL CANE CUT

HAVANA (Reuter) — Christmas in Cuba will be postponed until July, Prime Minister Fidel Castro said Monday night.

In a 3½-hour radio and television speech, Castro said that the holiday season, like last year, was being postponed so that the sugar cane harvest would not be delayed.

He said that the best time to harvest the sugar cane crop was from November to May.

Williston Hits PCB Over Ban

"We work overtime to make things difficult," Williston, a member of the board, admitted to SPEC, central Vancouver and Cowichan-Malahat branches, and the Richmond Anti-Pollution Association when they made their appeals here against the hearing's exclusion of them.

The hearing, allowing four objectors to appear, was on an application by Utah Construction and Mining Co. to dump wastes from a huge base metal complex under construction at Port Hardy into Rupert Inlet.

AWAIT DECISION

Board chairman William Venables adjourned the hearing indefinitely pending the outcome of today's appeal by SPEC and RAPA.

A decision on the two appeals has been reserved.

"It seems to be a rather superficial situation for which to tie up as many dollars and as much time as we have this morning," Williston said following the SPEC presentation.

TECHNICALITY

But apparently they had been refused permission to appear at the Port Hardy hearing because of a technicality: the branch changed its name from "Duncan" to "Cowichan-Malahat" this summer.

"This must be the most expensive analysis of two names which has taken place here for some time," Williston said.

RAPA, represented by two attorneys, told the board today:

"Public confidence in the administration of the Pollution Control Act is undermined when an organization representing a significant body of the public is excluded from the proceedings."

FAMILY DIES IN CABLECAR

MERANO, Italy (AP) — A runaway cablecar plunged down a mountainside in the Alpine foothills today, carrying five members of a family to their death.

The victims — two men, two women and a child — were riding the privately-operated cable lift up from the Alto Adige village of Postal to a farm on the mountainside.

The brakes failed when the car reached the top of the line and the car plunged back down, crashing into a pylon at the starting station.

Wounded Lie Bleeding

PHNOM PENH (Reuter) — About 200 wounded Cambodian soldiers are lying bleeding at the scene of fierce fighting northeast of here because no helicopters are available to rescue them, military sources said today.

Field reports that a Cambodian battalion, besieged by North Vietnamese at the Mekong River position of Peam Chikang, had suffered major casualties circulated in the capital. Military spokesmen said they were still out or radio contact with the government force.

Watchdog Body Asked On Car Insurance Hikes

By BRUCE YEMEN

The Social Credit chairman of the legislative committee on automobile insurance today urged the government to set up a special board to police insurance rates.

Herb Capozzi (SC—Vancouver Centre) issued the call following reports that B.C. insurance rates may rise even higher than the increase across Canada expected next year.

Estimates for the expected increase have ranged around 12 per cent or more, following a similar increase earlier this year.

Capozzi, in a telephone interview from Vancouver, said the legislative insurance committee during the last legislative session urged that the automobile insurance board be established to rule on rates and to study whether the sale of car insurance should be entirely in the hands of the industry.

The board could be established by cabinet order because the government's 1969 car insurance legislation contains provision for such an authority.

Anti-U.S. Rioting Rages in S. Viet City

QUI NHON, Vietnam (AP) — Anti-American rioting raged Monday and today in this central coastal city following the fatal shooting of a South Vietnamese high school student by an American soldier.

A 24-hour curfew was ordered but demonstrations, window-smashing and the burning of U.S. military vehicles continued. Some American troops were injured by flying rocks, informants said.

Qui Nhon was placed off limits to all Americans.

Informed U.S. sources said the demonstrators, estimated at between 2,500 and 4,000, demanded that the American soldier who killed the youth be turned over to South Vietnamese authorities for immediate trial.

The soldier was not identified. He was in custody, and military officials were investigating the shooting.

Informed sources said the student was killed Monday afternoon when a group of Vietnamese youths climbed aboard an American Army truck carrying boxes of C-rations and tried to steal some of them.

A soldier in the truck fired a warning shot, the sources said. It killed a high school student standing nearby who was not involved in the looting attempt.

Several students paraded the dead boy's body through the streets, chanting "Yankee Go Home" and attracting followers as they marched. School children began hurling rocks at U.S. soldiers, smashing the windows of American jeeps and burning vehicles.

After Canada, What? Cross to Decide Next Post

LONDON, Eng. (CP) — James Cross discussed his future with foreign office officials today but gave no indication where his next posting will be.

Accompanied by his wife, the British diplomat drove into London from his countryside retreat to confer with Oliver Wright, chief personnel officer in the foreign office.

The couple had been spending the weekend at Dorneywood, official country residence of Sir Alec Douglas-Home, the foreign secretary.

Cross appeared to be recovering from his 60-day terrorist ordeal. He smiled and posed for photographers as he entered the government building for his first appointment since his arrival from Montreal Saturday night. But he declined to make any statement.

The foreign office said he planned to make a full statement at a press conference Wednesday afternoon.

REPORT RECOMMENDS PAMPHLET WITH PILLS

OTTAWA (CP) — Each time a woman buys birth control pills she should also get a pamphlet warning her of signs of potential trouble and emphasizing the need for continuing supervision by her doctor.

This is the recommendation to the government by a committee of medical specialists in a report tabled in the Commons today.

Public Hearing Set In Nursing Home Bid

The next step toward building a $4 million retirement centre on the site of the former Mountain View home, at Cadboro Bay and Bowker, will be taken on Dec. 21.

At 7:30 p.m. that day a public hearing will be held in Oak Bay municipal hall on National Nursing Homes Ltd.'s bid to build a centre that would contain 200 guest rooms and 36 de luxe suites.

The public hearing is necessary to change the current bylaw which restricts land usage to apartment construction.

At Monday's council meeting, on the suggestion of Mayor Frances Elford, council stipulated that no part of the construction could rise more than 25 feet higher than the land contour. It also agreed that the back of the building must be 125 feet from the rear line of the property on Cranmore.

BYLAW TABLED

Another zoning bylaw which would have paved the way for construction of a nine-story apartment house on Beach, bewteen the Rudyard Kipling and Beresford Manor was tabled.

Acting on a motion by Ald. Norman Pimlott, council agreed that the bylaw should be considered by the incoming 1971 council.

Several people attended the meeting to protest the issue and were assured by the mayor that it was unlikely that a public hearing would be heard until "well into 1971."

Ald. Brian Smith objected to the developer's plans to have a traffic entrance on Beach Drive, because it would add to congestion on the well-travelled road.

24 TO LOSE HOMES

He again pointed out that the consturction would mean the loss of homes for 24 people of moderate means in favor of providing 56 high-income units.

Council's A committee will study a proposal by Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi that a training and work plan be set up in Oak Bay for persons receiving social assistance.

Designed to help people who are ineligible for enrolment in upgrading or vocational training Manpower programs, the plan would provide learning and working situations as a preparation for vocational training or employment.

Candidates would receive full pay for the work portion of their training, the costs being shared between the municipality and the province.

BUDGET APPROVED

Council approved the provisional budget of the Greater Victoria Public Library Board.

Mayor Elford said approval meant that Oak Bay undertook to pay its share of the costs of the first three months of operation in 1971.

"I notice that the budget includes 12 months' operating costs for an Oak Bay branch and a second Saanich branch. Neither branch would be in operation for the entire year."

She also noted that the budget's salary total did not include any increases that might be granted in 1971.

In other business, council:

● Referred to A committee for study a recommendation by the United Church of Canada that a Landlord and Tenant Grievance Board be set up.

● Endorsed the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce's brief, urging pressure to locate the proposed West Coast Marine Scientific Institute in Victoria.

● Gave approval for young members of the Seventh Day Adventist Church to sing carols and solicit donations in Oak Bay during the pre-Christmas season.

● Adopted a bylaw calling for increased fire protection for tenants of apartment houses.

● Referred a request from Wade, Stockdill, Armour and Blewett to be considered as architects for the centennial branch libraries to the public library board and the Greater Victoria Centennial Committee in 1971.

SAANICH EMPLOYEES GIVEN DEC. 24 OFF

Saanich municipal employees will get the day before Christmas off.

Council agreed to this Monday night, after earlier deciding the employees would have half that day off.

Boxing Day falls on a Saturday this year. But Saanich employees do not have in their union agreements a provision for a day in lieu when a statutory holiday falls on a non-working day.

Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt employees have this provision and are taking the day before Christmas off, council was told.

Mayor Hugh Curtis told council that no representations were made to him "formally or informally" but he considered it more sensible and in the spirit of Christmas to give the day off.

Municipal Pension Increases Approved by Saanich Council

Saanich council approved a finance committee recommendation Monday night endorsing new arrangements for municipal pensions.

The change is expected to cost the municipality about $40,000 a year.

The pensions report was recommended by the municipal advisory committee on pensions of the Union of B.C. Municipalities. The executive of the UBCM has adopted the report which will be submitted to the provincial government for implementation.

Victoria Ald. Percy Frampton has said the changes will cost the city an extra $70,000 a year.

Based on the highest nine-year average monthly salary, a list of examples shows increases ranging from $6 to $285 a month and percentage increased from a low of 8 per cent to a high of 54 per cent.

On a percentage basis, the $524 a month a person would get 8 per cent more while the $1,192 a month person would get 54 per cent more.

This will produce pensions, excluding the Canada Pension Plan, of $49 a month for the lowest-paid person to $814 a month for the highest-paid person.

Quiz Team Adds 2 Wins

University of Victoria's four-man quiz team rolled up two more victories in Ottawa over the weekend.

Uvic defeated Bishop's University of Lennoxville, Que., by a score of 295-35 and University of Calgary 370-0.

The matches are being taped by the Canadian Television network for broadcast early in 1971.

Uvic had previously defeated McGill and Waterloo in November. Each match means $1,000 in scholarship funds to the winner and $500 to the loser. A single defeat knocks a school out of the competition.

Members of the Uvic team are Bruce Izard, Dennis Johnson, Robert McDougall, all of Victoria, and Glen Paruk of Port Alberni. Prof. Alfred Loft of the history department is the coach.

The team will return to Ottawa in January for two more matches, one against the Royal Military college, Kingston.

'BOOBY TRAP' CALLED OFF

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UPI) — Topless entertainment in the form of three young female musicians known as "The Booby Trap" was cancelled Monday by the owners of The Mad Russian because of fear of a possible police raid.

One of the owners, Henry Starno, 28, said the evening performance was called off on the advice of an attorney, who said the show would be considered "lewd" by law.

Merge Now Or Pay For It

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

This is the view of Victoria Alderman Clyde Savage who believes the present system of separate municipalities under a "vague" regional government is only creating more and more parochialism.

No form of real amalgamation ever takes place without the provincial minister of municipal affairs saying it must, Savage says.

Having sat as an alternate member of the capital regional board for the last year, he believes any accomplishments by the region to date have been made only in spite of "impossible political influence."

A regional government would not be suited to govern the whole area, he says.

"It is my view that urban government and rural government are two entirely different forms of government and must of necessity be (handled) by totally different methods."

The answer, says Savage, is some form of metro government for the urban area comprised of Victoria, Oak Bay, part of Saanich and Esquimalt, with the regional government in charge of all rural areas as well as matters that effect both areas crucially.

Furthermore, the new arrangement must be "so set up that complete co-operation between them must result.

"The minister, the capital regional district and the elected officials of municipal governments will probably respond that this is what is happening, and there is evidence that some progress has been made in this direction. But I maintain that time is of the essence, and the public cannot afford the slow buggy ride which they are getting."

At present, Savage says, the terms of reference for the regional government are "incomplete, vague and entirely without authority, and create parochial government at its worst. . . ."

With a growing regional government bureaucracy there should be "some decrease in costs of local government. However, this is not the case as costs are also increasing at the municipal level. I can see no reason for two areas of government not co-operating to consolidate these costs.

"It is my contention that the public, who pays for these costs, is being taken down the garden path with spiralling costs unparalleled in local government."

Savage points to a recent Victoria initiative to get the region and the province to come together and study transportation needs for the whole area.

The result was that the city was "told we were moving in isolation, and that the capital regional district had already moved ahead in this field. There can be no progress unless all parties concerned work together."

Another situation that illustrates the problem: "I contend that the hospital situation is intolerable to our society, and would not be in this condition if the capital regional district had the authority to make a decision without outside influences interfering."

The provincial government, he says, is following a course which lets "the chips fall as they may, hoping in due course that problems will be solved, but in my mind the time has come for more concrete plans and action.

"The several municipalities are not going to agree to any amalgamation of services, which is quite evident from the remarks and discussions of the various councils," he says.

"It is time that the provincial government shows some leadership in setting up a workable combination of regional and municipal government that can plan the future for this area."

Chief Refuses To Close Down 'Unsound Hall'

Saanich Fire Chief Joseph Sutherland said today his department has "no intention" of taking action to close a community hall in Gordon Head "unless someone can show me it's necessary."

He made the comment after the municipal building department recommended to council that the Gordon Head Mutual Improvement Society hall, Tyndall Avenue, be demolished on the grounds it is unsafe.

A section of the Fire Marshal Act provides for inspection and, if a fire would endanger life or property, ordering destruction or repair of the building.

Concern expressed by the building department was about structural aspects and fear of collapse. A dance is scheduled for New Year's Eve, after which the hall is to be closed with a new municipal facility opening nearby in late January.

'NOT TOO UNHAPPY'

Sutherland said his depart*ment looked at the hall in the* summer and "it didn't look too bad." There was concern about a rear exit but because the hall was due to come to an end anyway, "we said if they put an exit sign at the rear and a couple of extinguishers we were not too unhappy."

He described the furnace room as "one of the best of community halls in the lower Island. From a fire safety standpoint, we are not too concerned."

He also said there are time delays even if the fire department takes action. First, a notice is issued and then there are 10 days to appeal to the fire marshal who has to come from Vancouver to make an inspection and then it can go to court. He didn't know if activites at the hall would have to cease "until all this is over."

Council has tabled the issue for viewing, a step in the demolition procedure. Even if demolition is ordered, there is a 30-day notice period.

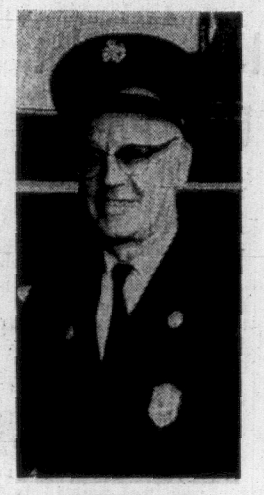
A report by Joseph Barber-Starkey, municipal development engineer, said a letter was sent to the society *recommending group activi*ties be discontined because of the "unsound" state of the hall. While a date could not be foretold for a structural failure, it is a hazard and demolition was recommended.

The hall was viewed by officials of the building and



SUTHERLAND
. . . no fire threat

Society president Jack Groves told council that other than a fire marshal's inspection, after which action was taken, the group had received no notice the building was in bad shape.

'TALKED OUT OF IT'

He said all activities have been cancelled except a dog obedience class and a New Year's Eve dance. After the beginning of the year it was planned to voluntarily close the hall.

The new Gordon Head swimming pool and community centre on the Lambrick Estate, not far away, is to open Jan. 23.

Ald. William Noel disagreed with the finding that the building is unsound and wanted to know more. Ald. Alan Newberry asked why action wasn't taken by municipal officials before now.

Starkey said the fire chief was going to take action several months ago "but was talked out of it pending construction of the new hall."

Mayor Hugh Curtis said he is not prepared to "carry on my conscience" a possible tragedy at the planned dance.

A society member, W. E. Beck, told council he objects "strongly and questions the qualifications" of those who made the inspection and asked if they were structural engineers.

'IT WILL BREAK'

Starkey, himself an engineer, said it was a practical job that a contractor or heavy timber carpenter could do. He also referred to a report last April which recommended the premises be demolished.

Ald. William Campbell, a general contractor, said the next move the building makes "it will break. It is simple to fix up with a few tie rods, very inexpensive, so it couldn't collapse. The building is in terrible shape."

But a reading to council of the file on the subject included a comment that the hall is past the stage where remedial work is possible.

Both Curtis and Ald. Edith *Gunning urged that "some*thing more" be done than simply table for viewing. Others said this is the necessary legal step before demolition.

Ald. Leslie Passmore said "the fact that it will get this much publicity is a clear indication it will close tomorrow."

COLLEGE'S FIRST BUDGET $100,000 OVER

Council Member Resigns in Protest

Failure to keep Juan de Fuca College's first budget within boundaries promised ratepayers in September has prompted the resignation of a college councilman.

Dr. Victor Rogers, a Greater Victoria school trustee as well as a councilman, quit Monday night because the budget was nearly $100,000 higher than promised taxpayers when they approved the proposal to replace the present Institute of Adult Studies.

Greater Victoria school district ratepayers voted Oct. 10 and were told the cost of operating the college would be *about $250,000 or about six*tenths of a mill.

The Oct. 10 vote, however, was a non-money vote.

The budget approved Monday by the council set the local share of running the college at $286,709 for the 12 months from April 1, 1971, to March 31, 1972.

The council also set the fees at $200 annually.

The figure of $250 for fees was discussed by the council but turned down. The increased fee structure would have dropped the local cost figure to $241,559 or under the $250,000 estimate.

But the council was faced with two factors that complicated the budgetary picture.

The first was the $62,403 operating cost of the present Institute of Adult Studies from Jan. 1, 1971, to June 30, 1971, and the second was a recent provincial government switch putting college budgets on a fiscal-year basis rather than a calendar-year basis.

This second point means the council had to write a 15-month budget from Jan. 1, 1971, to March 31, 1972, to cover the operation of the institute and the college.

(If the council had only to budget for 1971 for the operation of both the institute and college cost would have been $242,732 to be paid by local ratepayers. This would be .639 mills or very close to the six-tenths-mill figure officials estimated the college would cost earlier in the fall.)

The 15-month budget, however, will cost the taxpayer $349,112 or 9.9 mills.

Rogers said today the council wasn't being honest by allowing the college budget to overrun estimates promised the electorate for the Oct. 10 plebiscite.

He added that if the council had agreed to the student fee of $250 a year instead of the $200 figure agreed to this would have been an attempt to keep the cost within the estimates.

Rogers and fellow councilman Allan McKinnon voted against the budget approval and the $200 fee motions.

Councillors were told they could not act on Rogers' resignation as he had been appointed by the provincial government.

'Hefty Blow' Fractures Man's Skull

A 22-year-old sailor who fractured another man's skull with a drunken punch Oct. 30 was fined $200 today when he pleaded guilty to assault causing bodily harm before Judge William Ostler.

Roderick Cupp, of CFB Esquimalt was entering Tillicum Club premises at 645 Johnson when he got into a scuffle with a man who had been blocking the doorway, court was told.

Both were intoxicated, police said, but when Cupp lashed out with a punch that struck the other man above the temple, the man collapsed unconscious.

Hospital treatment subse*quently revealed a depressed* skull fracture that required surgery and the insertion of a metal plate.

Ostler asked Cupp if he was a professional prize fighter and when the man said no the judge commented on the punch being "a pretty hefty blow."

The judge said his sentence was lenient because there was no evidence that Cupp intended to seriously harm his opponent.

City Hall Prods Hydro

Victoria city council decided today to prod B.C. Hydro and the Capital Regional District for information and policy on underground power transmission.

The move comes following a letter from the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission which asks what action occurred when the commission asked for a technical study on underground transmission.

Mayor Courtney Haddock told council's B Committee that a year ago a B.C. Hydro official "promised" some action but nothing has been received.

The city will write to both B.C. Hydro and the region for a progress report.

DRIVERS STAY ON OVERTIME

Bus Hours to Remain As Is

Victoria bus drivers will not follow the lead of Vancouver drivers in refusing to work overtime, a B.C. Hydro spokesman said today.

It was reported from Vancouver the overtime cutback will force many residents, particularly University of B.C. students, to seek other means of transportation.

H. R. Halls, Victoria transportation manager, said "voluntary overtime" was involved.

"There's always a certain amount of overtime during the rush hour, and the drivers volunteer to take it," Halls said.

Bus drivers and mechanics, members of the Amalgamated Transit Union, are involved in contract negotiations with Hydro and recently served 72-hour strike notice.

The former contract expired Oct. 31, and under its terms drivers earned $3.75 an hour and mechanics $4.35.

The Victoria local has about 200 members. A spokesman for the union could not be reached today.

Hooson Named Manager

unanimous choice

Assistant city manager William Hooson was named by Victoria city council Monday to succeed Dennis Young as city manager.

Hooson, 49, was appointed assistant in 1964 and before that was city welfare administrator.

He will begin duties as manager Feb. 1 when Young moves to the Capital Regional District government office as executive director. Young's appointment was made Nov. 27.

Hooson's appointment was made following an in-camera council meeting Monday afternoon. It was announced the vote was unanimous.

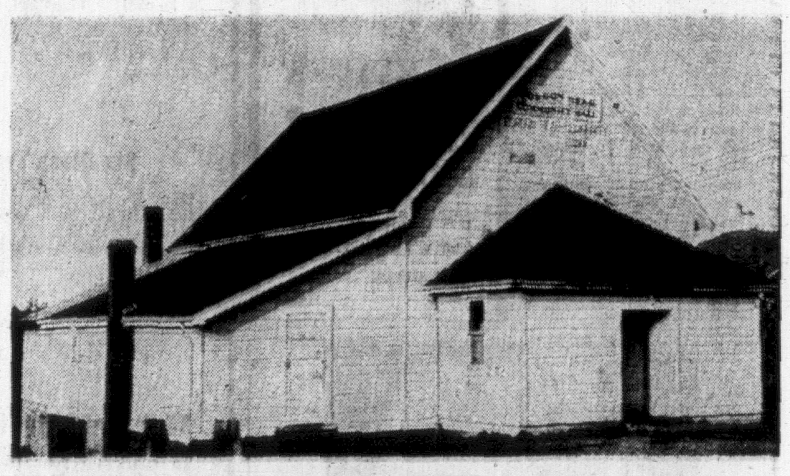
Salary is $22,000, rising to $23,000 after one year.

Hooson said following his appointment he is "very pleased that council gave me this vote of confidence."



Will a New Year's Dance Bring Its Walls Down?

Arthur Mayse . . .

JUST OVER A WEEK AGO I told you about 230 elementary-grade children whose school library consisted of books in two distinct categories.

There were the volumes bought from their own salaries by staff members. The others, which is to say about half, were so old and so worn by generations of young readers that they should have been retired long since.

Today, thanks to the generosity of Victorians who feel that children who want to read should be given the chance, the South Park school library situation is changing for the better.

For the past week, I've been sharing my desk space with books, books, books. They arrived in bags and cartons and neatly-corded bundles.

So far, acting for the donors, I've passed close to 200 titles on to South Park. They're being catalogued now, as welcome additions to the library.

And one thing sure: they will not lack eager readers.

But occasionally he runs into something that he doesn't pretend to understand.

More than once he has wondered whether the great carnivores that he photographs at ranges as close as 17 feet are possessed of an extra sense.

As he explained last week when he brought his very fine color film, Grizzly Country, to Victoria, he had no luck in shooting grizzly footage during his first attempts.

He and his two sons toiled long and hard to get the big bears in their lenses. Each time, though, their camera quarry lost no time in removing itself from the scene.

"That year," Andy explained, "we'd taken rifles along as a precaution. All we got on film was a succession of grizzly backsides. When we moved in, the bears moved out."

Furthermore, the grizzlies continued to spook even when the Russells decided to leave their firearms in camp.

Next year they took no rifles, and got any number of bear sequences.

"I can't account for it," Andy said, "but they seemed to know we were harmless."

His question:

Is it possible that some animals are gifted with what man has labelled extra-sensory perception?

Saturday will be municipal elections day, and wherever two or three are gathered together, the candidates for office are making their pitches. Many are veterans of civic administration who know the ropes. They're also aware that a place on council or board can have its little drawbacks.

For the benefit of untried candidates who have yet to test the heat in the municipal kitchen, it wouldn't hurt to list a few of these.

There are the meetings. There are the committee meetings. There is the discovery that much of any municipality's essential business is complex, time-taking, and deadly dull.

There is also the budget, which is unfailingly so large that it provokes squeals of dismay from the taxpayers, and so small that it can't possibly accomplish even half of what needs doing in any year.

The successful candidate needn't expect, either, that the voters who inscribed their Xs after his name have full confidence in his abilities. Let him fail to please, and they will be among his loudest critics. They may even give him a worse time than those who didn't support him.

He can expect to be damned if he does and damned if he doesn't, and let me be the first to wish him luck. As your rep and mine, he's going to need it!

VICTORIA, B.C., TUESDAY, DECEMBER 8, 1970 —PAGE 29

These Committees Go on Forever . . .

If certain recommendations are accepted, the status of women commission will have spawned a trio of further committees and commissions:

1. Implementation committees, to plan how to put into effect the report's 167 recommendations.

2. A human rights commission for every province and for the federal government, with wide powers to protect all Canadians, not just women. The report estimates special divisions to deal with discrimination about women would be needed for seven to 10 years.

3. A national status-of-women council to undertake research on matters relevant to women, propose legislation and policy, consult provincial women's bureaus and volunteer organizations and form a link with the United Nations Commission on the Status of Women.

They'd Be Happy At Royal Roads

Another commission recommendation proposed that women be admitted to military colleges and allowed to enlist in the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Commenting on the proposal, Royal Roads registrar Michael Meiklejohn said, enthusiastically, "Oh, isn't that a lovely one!"

There are already three women students registered at the college for extension courses provided by Royal Roads faculty," Meiklejohn pointed out.

As to full-time women cadets, the registrar is certain "it will come in course."

"Women are just as capable as men in running a war or a peace," he believes citing his observations in Yugoslavia where women in the army shared equality, for better or for worse.

As for the present cadets, Meiklejohn felt it was safe to assume that male cadets would be in favor of admitting women to the colleges as fellow-students.

"It would solve a number of problems."

Superintendent Ross Pilkey, administrative officer for E Division, was puzzled when asked to comment on the recommendation that enlistment in the RCMP be open to women.

"There are a great many women in the RCMP now," he said. "One of the top fingerprint experts at headquarters in Ottawa is a woman."

They are civilian members of the RCMP, he explained, and have all the rights and privileges of members of the force except that they are not peace officers. "This means they cannot make an arrest," he said.

Superintendent Pilkey said that they thought of such women as experts and members of the force and he did not understand what more the commission could want.

"Unless the commission wants them to ride in the musical ride," he said.

The report also suggests the federal government could provide similar funds for men and women for university training, in return for a commitment to work in a developing area such as Canada's north after graduation.

Lynn Brassington of Uvic firmly agreed with this recommendation.

In a chapter on women and education, the commission says Canadian girls are being subtly influenced by textbooks portraying women as passive creatures with limited choices in life.

The commission calls this "sex-typing" and says it is found in the educational system from kindergarten on.

Lynn Brassington felt that in many cases the development set up now was psychologically deterring to most enthusiastic females. Most fields are dominated by men. Perhaps women receiving special funds would be given more encouragement by male professors, and not made to feel like observers instead of worthy contributors.

ANNE FRANCIS BIRD

THE ALUMNAE

"They must think all we consumers have to do all day is consume, consume, consume!"

Victoria Comments on Commission

When Anne Francis Bird, chairman of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women, was in Victoria in 1968 for the commission's first public hearings, she commented in an interview:

"I like Margaret Mead's remark. 'The time has passed when women can afford not to be involved in the society in which they live.' Equal opportunities bring equal responsibilities."

The report tabled in Parliament Monday stressed both.

Victorians asked to comment on the commission and its recommendations agreed with a number of points but did not hail the report as a miraculous break for the future of Canadian women.

Helen O'Malia, aldermanic candidate in Esquimalt, feels that "common sense" could have provided most of the recommendations of the commission at much less expense.

Mrs. O'Malia agrees with commissioner John Humphrey that the quota system proposed by the commission to guarantee women seats in government is ridiculous.

"It's as silly as to demand a place in government because you have blue eyes," she said. She feels that women can make it on their own abilities and avoid preferential treatment.

Mrs. O'Malia was referring to Ottawa reports that Humphrey, one of the two men on the seven-member royal commission team, dissociated himself from the commission report, which he says will introduce new kinds of social discrimination.

The report recommended that two qualified women from each province be summoned to the Senate as seats become vacant, until a more equitable membership is achieved.

This would establish a quota for women senators, an insult to Canadian women who are capable of standing on their own feet, Humphrey said in a minority report.

The report has also recommended that the federal government give a mother a taxable cash allowance of $500 a year for each child under 16 years of age.

Humphrey, a law professor at McGill University, says he cannot accept recommendations that family allowances be greatly increased, since this would encourage larger families when population is a major world problem.

Elizabeth Murrison, who runs an abortion counselling service, agrees with the commissioner.

She feels the proposal would encourage people to have more children. She would rather see tax penalties imposed on families with more than two children.

Mrs. O'Malia, aldermanic candidate in Esquimalt, called the proposal "ridiculous."

Canada should permit abortion on demand for any woman pregnant 12 weeks or less, the majority report recommended.

The report also recommends that an abortion be permitted at the request of a woman pregnant more than 12 weeks if continuation of the pregnancy will endanger her physical or mental health or if there is danger that the

Commission Said To Be a Bargain

The Royal commission on the status of women has been plagued by murmurs of public discontent since it was first brought into being by the Pearson government in February, 1967.

Charlotte Whitton was outspoken as usual.

"It's the most fantastically-inexcusable thing I've ever heard of. I've been opposed to it from the beginning. The doors are open now, if women don't want to be sissy-pussies making sandwiches in the ladies' auxiliary."

Most of the critics aimed their blasts at the cost of a commission they considered unnecessary.

Two years after the commission was set up its expenses had risen to just over $1 million.

That figure included $37,787 in salary and $4,455 in expenses for the chairman. Salaries for the six other commissioners at that time ranged from $11,925 to $25,350, with expenses from $2,767 to $11,978.

Salaries for senior staff members ranged from $10,500 to $42,966.

By June 1970, estimates were given suggesting that expenses would total $1,779,869 by the time the report was presented.

No final figures are available so far, but the commission members have always prided themselves on their careful budgeting.

They were congratulated by the supervisor of the royal comissions for the Privy Council, who told chairman Anne Francis Bird that she had done well in keeping the budget down.

At the same time, he drew her attention to the frugality of Chief Justice Dana Porter whose three-year commission on banking and finance ended in 1964 after spending only $747,000.

Suppose your washing machine goes on the blink right after you move into a new town. You're miles away from the dealer you bought it from and you don't know the name of a reliable serviceman. Where can you turn for help?

Or what if your refrigerator breaks down just after you've loaded it with a week's supply of food. Where are you going to find someone to fix it fast?

Well, if it's an Inglis appliance, your search is ended. You just call the number listed above. Collect. Any time of the day or night.

When you call, an Inglis Service Technician will answer. (If a woman answers, don't hang up, that's our answering service.) Our Technician will give you the name and number of the Inglis Service Centre nearest your home. Which means that your appliance will be repaired by men trained and authorized by Inglis. Men who know every Inglis appliance inside and out.

So if you own an Inglis appliance, we suggest you cut out our number and paste it somewhere on the machine. And if you don't own an Inglis, we suggest you save it anyway, because someday you might.

Inglis is the first major appliance manufacturer in the country to provide a service like this. Although, since our machines need so few repairs, we should have been the last.

TOUGH LEADERSHIP FIGHT LIKELY

Robarts to Quit Politics

WATER STREET in Olympia, Washington, lives up to its name today as cars sloshed through water hubcap-deep. More than four inches of rain has fallen since Friday clogging drains and flooding basements in many areas. Motorists had just expressed relief snow had gone. (AP Wirephoto).

Seven Want Ontario Post

TORONTO (CP) — John Robarts announced today he is quitting as Conservative premier of Ontario, saying nine years was long enough in the province's top job and the time had come to open the door to "new approaches."

Mr. Robarts told a news conference he will not contest the next provincial election and will remain in office only until a new party leader and premier is chosen at a leadership convention to be held either in February or March.

The 53-year-old premier gave no indication of his preference for a successor, expressing "complete confidence" in the party to choose a man who would be capable of leading it to victory in elections generally expected next fall.

Commenting on his nine years in office and the unbroken 27-year rule of the Conservatives, he noted that government policies need to be continuously revised and rethought.

Then he added that he has never believed any one man or group has a monopoly of ideas and that "it is necessary to provide opportunity for new approaches to be made available."

In a question-and-answer session following his formal statement, Mr. Robarts said he plans to return to private law practice in London, where he has represented the riding of London North for 19 years.

"My name is still on the door," he said.

The premier refused to speculate on the possibility of an election in the next six months but noted the government won't be four years old until next October.

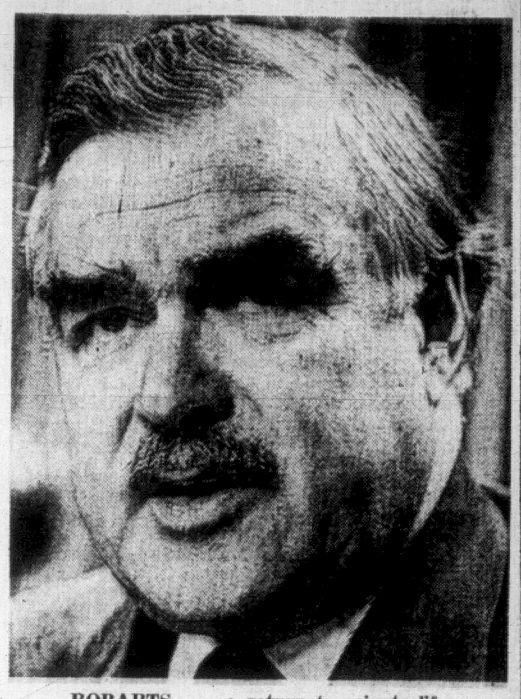
The front-runner is considered to be William Davis, 41, of Brampton, the minister of education. It was from this post that Mr. Robarts launched his own leadership bid to succeed Leslie Frost in 1961.

Mines Minister Allan Lawrence, 45, a Toronto lawyer, had expected to be first into the ring after he announced a news conference for later today. But he later cancelled the news conference.



ROBARTS . . . a return to private life

What Kind of Man Is Robarts?
—Profile on Page 41

Other leading contenders are Darcy McKeough, 37-year-old Chatham businessman and minister of municipal affairs, and Robert Welch, 42, a St. Catharines lawyer who holds the portfolio of provincial secretary.

Also mentioned as potential candidates are Health Minister Thomas, Wells, 40, of Toronto; Energy Minister George Kerr, 46, of Burlington; Bert Lawrence, 47, of Ottawa, minister of financial and commercial affairs, and Rene Brunelle, 50, of Moonbeam, minister of lands and forests.

Ontario Leads Fight For Tax Concessions

OTTAWA (CP) — A two-day federal-provincial finance ministers meeting ended today with agreement to meet again in Toronto in February to discuss tax concessions for small business.

That may be the last chance the provinces will have to make their pitch before Finance Minister Edgar Benson makes final decisions on his plans for revising the Income Tax Act, to be presented in a budget next spring.

Charles MacNaughton, Ontario provincial treasurer, presented a plan to today's conference to grant the owner-operators of small Canadian business a healthy tax cut on money they invest or reinvest in their enterprises.

Mr. Benson said the MacNaughton plan is interesting, but contained some difficulties. He did not elaborate.

Ottawa's plan, embodied in Mr. Benson's white paper on proposed tax law revision 13 months ago, is to treat large and small businesses alike from a tax point of view, but offer small business some other form of help.

NEEDS TAX BREAK

Dave Steuart, provincial treasurer of Saskatchewan, described the MacNaughton proposal as a tax deferral plan and said Saskatchewan thinks the small businessman—including the farmer—should have a tax break as well as a tax deferral.

The final session of the conference also looked briefly at the federal government's new white paper on social security, but put off detailed discussion until provincial welfare ministers have examined it more fully.

Raymond Garneau, recently appointed finance minister of Quebec, said the social security white paper, the federal government's white paper on unemployment insurance, and two studies nearing completion in Quebec on social security, now should form the basis of a general revision of the whole system. Quebec wants to take over more welfare schemes as a provincial respinsibility.

The Ontario plan for tax concessions to small Canadian business would be to allow a 50-per cent credit against income taxes otherwise payable for any investment, up to $10,000 a year, that a person makes in his own business, whether individually owned or a partnership.

MORE ENCOURAGING

This, Mr. MacNaughton said, would be a greater encouragement for small business than the current federal tax law which imposes a lower rate of taxes on the first $35,000 of business profits.

The Ontario plan was tabled at the conference when it resumed its two-day session, dealing today with the federal white paper proposals for revision of the Income Tax Act.

The federal plan would do away with the 21-per-cent tax rate on the first $35,000 of company profits, and tax all company profits at about 50 per cent. Ottawa has promised to introduce some other small business.

Mr. MacNaughton's plan would be limited to individuals who put money into their own small businesses in Canada.

Watchdog Body Asked On Car Insurance Hikes

By BRUCE YEMEN

The Social Credit chairman of the legislative committee on automobile insurance today urged the government to set up a special board to police insurance rates.

Herb Capozzi (SC—Vancouver Centre) issued the call following reports that B.C. insurance rates may rise even higher than the increase across Canada expected next year.

Estimates for the expected increase have ranged around 12 per cent or more, following a similar increase earlier this year.

Capozzi, in a telephone interview from Vancouver, said the legislative insurance committee during the last legislative session urged that the automobile insurance board be established to rule on rates and to study whether the sale of car insurance should be entirely in the hands of the industry.

The board could be established by cabinet order because the government's 1969 car insurance legislation contains provision for such an authority.

Anti-U.S. Rioting Rages in S. Viet City

QUI NHON, Vietnam (AP) — Anti-American rioting raged Monday and today in this central coastal city following the fatal shooting of a South Vietnamese high school student by an American soldier.

A 24-hour curfew was ordered but demonstrations, window-smashing and the burning of U.S. military vehicles continued. Some American troops were injured by flying rocks, informants said.

Qui Nhon was placed off limits to all Americans.

Informed U.S. sources said the demonstrators, estimated at between 2,500 and 4,000, demanded that the American soldier who killed the youth be turned over to South Vietnamese authorities for immediate trial.

The soldier was not identified. He was in custody, and military officials were investigating the shooting.

Informed sources said the student was killed Monday afternoon when a group of Vietnamese youths climbed aboard an American Army truck carrying boxes of C-rations and tried to steal some of them.

A soldier in the truck fired a warning shot, the sources said. It killed a high school student, standing nearby who was not involved in the looting attempt.

Several students paraded the dead boy's body through the streets, chanting "Yankee Go Home" and attracting followers as they marched. School children began hurling rocks at U.S. soldiers, smashing the windows of American jeeps and burning vehicles.

PCB Over Ban

Resources Minister Ray Williston today waded into his own government's red tape in preventing a SPEC brief coming before a Pollution Control Board hearing last week in Port Hardy.

"We work overtime to make things difficult," Williston, a member of the board, admitted to SPEC, central Vancouver and Cowichan-Malahat branches, and the Richmond Anti-Pollution Association when they made their appeals here against the hearing's exclusion of them.

The hearing, allowing four objectors to appear, was on an application by Utah Construction and Mining Co. to dump wastes from a huge base metal complex under construction at Port Hardy into Rupert Inlet.

AWAIT DECISION

Board chairman William Venables adjourned the hearing indefinitely pending the outcome of today's appeal by SPEC and RAPA.

A decision on the two appeals has been reserved.

"It seems to be a rather superficial situation for which to tie up as many dollars and as much time as we have this morning," Williston said following the SPEC presentation.

TECHNICALITY

But apparently they had been refused permission to appear at the Port Hardy hearing because of a technicality: the branch changed its name from "Duncan" to "Cowichan-Malahat" this summer.

"This must be the most expensive analysis of two names which has taken place here for some time," Williston said.

RAPA, represented by two attorneys, told the board today:

"Public confidence in the administration of the Pollution Control Act is undermined when an organization representing a significant body of the public is excluded from the proceedings."

FAMILY DIES IN CABLECAR

MERANO, Italy (AP) — A runaway cablecar plunged down a mountainside in the Alpine foothills today, carrying five members of a family to their death.

The victims — two men, two women and a child — were riding the privately-operated cable lift up from the Alto Adige village of Postal to a farm on the mountainside.

The brakes failed when the car reached the top of the line and the car plunged back down, crashing into a pylon at the starting station.

Wounded Lie Bleeding

PHNOM PENH (Reuter) — About 200 wounded Cambodian soldiers are lying bleeding at the scene of fierce fighting northeast of here because no helicopters are available to rescue them, military sources said today.

Field reports that a Cambodian battalion, beseiged by North Vietnamese at the Mekong River position of Peam Chikang, had suffered major casualties circulated in the capital.

After Canada, What? Cross to Decide Next Post

LONDON, Eng. (CP) — James Cross discussed his future with foreign office officials today but gave no indication where his next posting will be.

Accompanied by his wife, the British diplomat drove into London from his countryside retreat to confer with Oliver Wright, chief personnel officer in the foreign office.

The couple had been spending the weekend at Dorneywood, official country residence of Sir Alec Douglas-Home, the foreign secretary.

Cross appeared to be recovering from his 60-day terrorist ordeal. He smiled and posed for photographers as he entered the government building for his first appointment since his arrival from Montreal Saturday night. But he declined to make any statement.

The foreign office said he planned to make a full statement at a press conference Wednesday afternoon.

REPORT RECOMMENDS PAMPHLET WITH PILLS

OTTAWA (CP) — Each time a woman buys birth control pills she should also get a pamphlet warning her of signs of potential trouble and emphasizing the need for continuing supervision by her doctor.

This is the recommendation to the government by a committee of medical specialists in a report tabled in the Commons today.
